WEEKEND WRITER SAYS 'YES'

Do English Schools Top Ours?

Local Educators Express Views

The statement, "English Schools Are Better Than Ours," is the title of an article in Weekend Magazine accompanying today's Times. The writer—41-year-old University of B.C. official Arthur Sager, now studying at Oxford—bases his belief in the superiority of English schooling on the tuition received in England by his three children and a nephew. Following is what local school authorities thought of Sager's article and his blanket statement that "competition is sadly lacking in Canadian education and there are no challenging heights to scale in Canadian Schools."

By DAVID COWLISHAW

In the main, Victoria's top educators agreed with Arthur Sager that English schooling is superior to Canadian.

But they hastened to qualify that judgment with a rash of arguments in defence of Canadian educational methods that Sager evidently did not consider before rushing into print.

School officials—both in the provincial Department of Education and at the local level—obviously did not like the article.

It was prostituted by bias, they said. It tended to over-generalize. Sager was unfair.

With but one exception, Victoria's school experts pointed indignantly at the number of years England had been perfecting her schooling system, then compared it to the relatively little time Canada had been at it.

But after all the harsh words and impetuous patriotic squeals had died away, they one and all admitted to envy of the English school curriculum, promising to follow in the old country's footsteps when time and money permitted.

There was not complete surrender, however. Several educators felt England had not all the answers and might well benefit from adopting some

'Awfully Difficult to Compare'

They shook their heads, too, over his theory that "teaching must be less frustrating in England than in Canada." But the author won approval for his assertion that Canadian departments of education were "niggardly" by comparison with their English counterparts.

Kenneth Leeming, 51-year-old vice-chairman of Greater Victoria School Board, began his reply to Sager's article with the admonition, "It is awfully difficult to compare the two school systems."

He then went on to point out that a scheme providing for faster tuition of top-notch Canadian students—"what we call an enriched program"—was being tried out in the province and, if successful, would parallel a similar English system.

"But I agree with Sager that there is some lack of competition in our schools. This is due to our method of reporting on students to parents."

When I was in school a child's rating, say from one to 35 if there were 35 children in the class, was based on examinations, not on classwork.

"In our day it was a challenge to get up the ladder."

Mr. Leeming would not accept that sport is over-emphasized in Canada, but conceded that "we make too much of the stars."

"We must educate people to the need for larger goals (are you listening, city council?) so that everyone may participate in games to develop sportsmanship. It has been truly said that many of England's battles were won on the playing fields of Eton."

The inference from Sager's article that sex flourished in Canadian schools was roundly refuted by Mr. Reeve.

"I don't agree," he said. "There is less opportunity for sex in Canadian schools than in Canadian homes."

In summary, Mr. Reeve stressed the age of England again and said he "would be disgusted if their schools weren't better than ours."

He also mentioned that Britain could go 2½ times into B.C. "education control is easy in a small country" and that in the 16 years he had been on the school board local student enrolment had climbed from 8,200 to 20,800.

"You could not find a similar situation anywhere in England."

Dulles To Europe For Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will leave Tuesday for London, Paris and Bonn for talks on Berlin and the problem of Germany.

The state department said Dulles "has concluded that it would be useful that at the present stage of developments in Europe for him to exchange views personally with the governments of the United Kingdom, France and Germany."

Officials said Dulles' trip was designed to work out strategy on meeting the Russian threat against Berlin and also to consider the tactics in dealing with the problem of a German peace treaty.

B.C. Man Plants 'H-Bomb' In U.S. as Shock Message

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Russian-born Vancouver man said Friday night he travelled across the United States to deposit a Russian-made replica of a "hydrogen bomb" between the White House and the Pentagon in Washington.

Nicholas Salvablanco, Schatroph, claiming to be a former Communist, told a press conference he would tell his story to the highest bidder. He said it "makes a farce of our defences against atomic warfare."

Salvablanco, as he calls himself, said the "bomb" in the form of a wooden box—was made in Odessa, Russia, and brought here on a Russian ship. He said he carried the thing through 15 states, crossing the Canada-U.S. border six times.

The box, 18 inches square, is labelled with two large letters HB, for hydrogen bomb. A small sign on the side of the box said it was made in the Soviet Union.

TWO MEN KILLED

Everything Wild In Card Session

NEW YORK (AP)—Two patrolmen, attracted by bottles falling from a second-floor window of a tenement, walked into an armed holdup of a card game today. A gun battle broke out and one policeman and one of the three holdup men were killed.

The two other bandits escaped. Patrolman Michael Talkowsky, 23, was mortally wounded. Before he collapsed, Talkowsky fired five bullets. His partner, patrolman Richard Melita, emptied his gun.

One of the gunmen tentatively identified as Francisco Cruz, 25, fell dead under the police counterfire.

The bottles were tossed by Sylvia Sepero, 40, the wife of one of the card-players. She had been ordered into another room during the holdup because she was pregnant and, while unobserved, she decided to signal for help.

Vessel Vanishes After Hitting Berg

(Times News Services)

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld.—Arctic darkness and worsening weather conditions closed in off the Greenland coast today dimming hope of survival for 95 persons aboard a Danish ship that hit an iceberg and was feared to have sunk.

"As time goes on the chances diminish but we're still looking," a Coast Guard spokesman in New York said.

The cargo-passenger vessel Hans Hedtoft was last heard from about 24 hours ago when it reported that it was sinking slowly. Searchers have found no sign of the ship.

Danish Premier H. C. Hansen said in Copenhagen that "fear is gnawing on us."

(A radio message picked up Friday said 90 passengers and 40 crew were aboard, but the Greenland department in Copenhagen said "she carried 55 passengers and 40 crew members. The department said all passengers were Danes or Greenlanders.")

The U.S. Coast Guard cutter Campbell, which reached the area in late morning, was expected to stand by during the long, cold night and resume its search in the morning.

The Coast Guard said weather in the disaster area tonight would be marked by 35 to 60 mile an hour winds, seas as high as 22 to 27 feet, visibility of less than one-mile and snow changing to rain.

A spokesman said the winds were shifting from north to south, bringing in fog, mist and pushing the ice pack together.

The official pointed out the difficulties of finding anyone in the remote area—cold, ice, isolation and only eight hours of daylight each day.

The cutter Campbell reported, "ice conditions make navigation in the search area very hazardous."

Five Ships in General Area

The small German trawler Johannes Kruss, first to reach the general area where Hedtoft was last reported, called in earlier today that it could find no trace of the ship.

There are five ships in the general area of the missing Hedtoft now, including the German fishing vessel Poseidon and two U.S. weather ships, Alpha and Bravo.

without finding any trace of the ship or lifeboats.

The Johannes Kruss reported at 7.10 a.m. that it had been searching for the stricken ship for eight hours without finding a trace. The trawler was buffeted by 60-mile-an-hour winds and high waves.

Ice packs were closing in from the north, adding to the hazards for ships steaming up from North Atlantic shipping lanes to join the search.

In Copenhagen, King Frederik IX summoned Premier H. C. Hansen to report on the progress of the search. Then Hansen called his cabinet into extraordinary session.

'Plenty Ice . . . We Must Go'

The Kruss radioed the approaching Campbell: "Have searched, nothing found or seen, no lights or lifeboats or ship."

"Plenty ice from northwest . . . we must go. We are becoming ice bound . . . it is dangerous for the ship and we can do no more."

The Hedtoft was in a danger zone that is not part of the North Atlantic steamship routes guarded by an international ice patrol, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said.

These areas have been patrolled by an international iceberg warning service since 1913, a year after the Titanic disaster.

The reported position of the Hedtoft was 30 miles southeast of Cape Farewell at the southern tip of Greenland, the coast guard said. The closest point of land was 24 miles away.

Most prominent of passengers aboard was Augo Lynge, one of Greenland's representatives to the Danish parliament.

'Unsinkable' Design Used In Vessel

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (UPI)—The Hans Hedtoft, Danish cargo-passenger ship reported sinking off Greenland after hitting an iceberg, was built specially to withstand that type of collision.

And she was skippered by a veteran of Arctic navigation, Capt. P. L. Rasmussen.

The Hedtoft was painted a bright orange, so that it would be easier to spot in snowstorms or bad weather.

In fact, the Royal Greenland Trading Company which built the 2,857-ton vessel as its flagship and sent it out on its ill-fated maiden voyage, did its best to make the ship "unsinkable."

Architects designing the ship drew from the years of experience the company and its crews had in Arctic sailing.

SEVEN COMPARTMENTS

Its hull was divided into seven water-tight compartments: If one or two of them took in water, the ship was designed to stay afloat because the water would remain only in the flooded compartments and would not spread to the rest of the hull.

To resist the ice that all ships encounter in northern waters, it had a full-length double bottom and strengthened sides. Such strengthening, however, cannot be expected to withstand a full-force collision with an iceberg.

It has an auxiliary engine in addition to its regular power plants reported flooded in its distress calls.

It carried three lifeboats made of light metal alloy, a motor launch, and several rubber dinghies that inflate automatically and are equipped with radios.

TOW TRUCK CREW used cutting torch to extricate three men from wreck of car which went off Trans-Canada Highway at Goldstream at 4 a.m. today. Pulled out between windshield and roof were Laszlo Kecskemeti, 556 Toronto, and Joseph Toth, 1559 Oak Bay Avenue, in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital, and Laszlo Kiraly, 910 Cook, discharged after emergency treatment of minor injuries. Car is total wreck.

NORMAN CRIBBENS IN THE LEGISLATURE

British Columbia's 52 legislators from far and wide are resting this weekend after the first week of the Throne Speech debate, and a pregnant silence dwells over the stately chamber where so many battles have yet to be fought.

So far, 16 members have spoken in the debate and the rest will be heard before next Friday when Premier Bennett brings down his anxiously-awaited budget.

The session up to now has been as quiet as the premier predicted, but there is little likelihood it will continue so. The CCF is in fighting mood over unemployment in B.C. and the two Liberals will have lots more to say about Wenner-Gren and the Peace River power project.

Most members think highly of the suggestion from Victoria MLA J. Donald Smith that tax relief should be given to owners of old homes in the city who wish to spend money improving them.

Mr. Smith said many such owners are afraid to improve their properties for fear of inviting higher taxes. He recommended tax exemptions to the extent of the improvements made.

"This is the most sensible proposition we have heard this session," commented a CCF member. "I hope the government will act upon it."

Wearing a bright red tie and matching carnation, Mr. Nimsick was in lively form as he twitted the government with being short of cabinet ministers.

He hinted that the many compliments showered on CCF member Randolph Harding by government members were intended to lure him over to the Social Credit ranks. "Are you so short of cabinet material?" asked Mr. Nimsick.

Mr. Harding supplied the answer. "We will have all the cabinet posts at the next election," he said.

My own impression is that government members are flattered Mr. Harding in a deliberate effort to discredit CCF leader Robert Strachan; and Mr. Harding is a much less formidable opponent. He is so quiet and reasonable that he might almost be called Liberal (with a small L).

When Education Minister Leslie Peterson stated that everyone who really wants university training should have the opportunity to get it, CCF member Tony Gargrave from Mackenzie remarked:

"I haven't had mine yet." Mr. Gargrave has taken two years of the arts course at the University of British Columbia and is now studying for law.

"We wish him good fortune in his university career," Mr. Peterson said, "and we hope he will graduate in due time."

SCHOOLS

agreed with Sager that English schools were better than Canadian schools, but she made little bones about her general approval of English schooling.

"We could learn much from England's educational system," she said. "I would like to have taken my post-graduate work in England. England is older, more cultured."

Mother of three children, one of them a teacher, Mrs. McGill felt many of the qualities of English schooling had still to be built into the Canadian system.

"But the pioneering days of Canada are past and already ours is a good—underline good—educational set-up."

Mrs. McGill chuckled and said "That's nonsense" when taxed with Sager's opinion that Canadian schoolchildren do not like to work hard, but added:

"If England teaches boys and girls that hard work as well as intelligence is necessary to overcome obstacles and make the most of opportunities—then England has a superior educational system."

She added that the "idea that work is something to be avoided is caught from parents."

In capsule, Mrs. McGill admired England's schooling but was convinced Canada would at least equal it in time—"a lot of time."

Municipal school inspector John Gough refused comment on the Sager article, except to say, "Mr. Sager has a right to his opinions. There is freedom of speech in this country, you know."

Provincial assistant director of curriculum John Meredith left discussion of the Sager piece to his superior, Dr. J. E. K. English, superintendent of education and deputy minister of education.

Dr. English labelled the article "silly" and replied "I wouldn't know" when asked if, in his opinion, English schools were better than Canadian.

"That statement cannot be proved," he said. "Mr. Sager's experiences, and they are just one's man's could be duplicated in thousands of cases across Canada."

You don't have to go abroad. We in B.C. have the type of school the people want. There are thousands of serious students in Canada who do their homework and take school seriously."

Type of School People Want

Final volleys in Sager's direction were aimed by Mrs. Elizabeth Maunsell, chairman of the school board public relations committee. But they did not always hit the target because Mrs. Maunsell, too, admitted to admiration of the English system of education.

"In England they don't try to cram in so much. They stick to the basic things. When Canadian boys and girls get to junior high school they have the idea they are grown up, but they are not. This doesn't happen in England."

Mrs. Maunsell also aligned herself with Sager in his denunciation of a Canadian system that made it "too easy" to get into universities.

"Many Canadians go to university just for the sake of being able to say they've been to one," she said.

But Mrs. Maunsell reserved final judgment on Sager's premise that the ultimate purpose of schooling in any country.

"What counts really, after all, is what type of citizens English schools turn out. That is the supreme test. When you know that, then you can decide whether her educational system is better than ours."

In short, local educators picked up a piece of chalk and scratched "We agree" on the blackboard in answer to Sager's opinion.

But they added the note that it would not always be that way and that one day, when Canada was as old as England is now and was not hamstrung by such things as space, money and that abstract quality, lack of culture, Canada's schools would equal those of the older country.

Meanwhile they were doing the best they could with the material at hand.

House Clears Decks For Serious Business

(From Times News Services)

OTTAWA—With the 10-day Throne Speech debate over, the House gets down next week to the brass tacks of legislative-business, starting with new supplementary spending estimates totalling $27,984,667.

After a Monday sitting earmarked for debate on private members' resolutions, the House will deal in turn with the estimates, government legislation on federal housing loans, fisheries improvement loans and the Trans-Canada Highway.

The speech debate closed Friday with a strong criticism from the CCF of the effect of United States laws on Canadian companies.

Hazen Argue, CCF House leader, said there is growing evidence that U.S. law is being used to curtail or control operations of Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. parent companies.

He presented a motion—technically one of non-confi-

The government forced the roll-call vote after a single voice from the CCF Party said "nay" to the motion on a voice vote.

"Dare to be a Daniel," said H. W. Herridge (CCF, Kootenay West) as he stood to vote.

The Liberal opposition's position has been that the vote on the motion of thanks to the governor-general does not imply confidence in the government.

Mr. Argue attacked the government for the action of Postmaster-General William Hamilton last month in removing a sub-post office from the suburban Toronto store of appliance dealer Nicholas Manfredi.

The government has said it was done on the complaint of William Beech (PC, York South) that Mr. Manfredi had engaged in political activity.

Mr. Argue Friday said it was because Mr. Manfredi had written a letter critical of Prime Minister Diefenbaker which was published in a Toronto newspaper.

The CCF leader said the government acted contrary to its own declarations about human rights by "persecuting" the store owner. The practice of dismissing government employees on an MP's complaint was "unfair, unjust, undemocratic and should be abolished."

But Mr. Argue's main point of attack was the U.S. law which prohibits U.S. companies—and their foreign subsidiaries—from trading with Red China.

He said that last summer Mr. Diefenbaker, after a meeting with President Eisenhower, was assured that Canadian law could govern opera-

Pioneer Busman 'Parks' Career

His driving career goes back to First World War times when, as a young immigrant from London, England, he drove street cars here.

Then he started his own one-man service, operating a 17-passenger vehicle between Douglas and Johnson and Holland and Burnside.

After this service was taken over by J. McWilliams, Mr. White drove a bus for Saanich Municipality on Lake Hill Road.

He joined Vancouver Coach Lines when it was formed in 1928 and drove buses up-Island for 15 years. He has spent the last 16 working in the machine shops.

Friday morning the busy mechanical staff halted work while Conway Parrott, general manager, presented Mr. White with an inscribed silver dish on behalf of the company.

Charles L. Wilson, comptroller, then presented him with a well-filled wallet from the office staff.

Mr. White is one of only two surviving employees who have been with the company since its inception in 1928, Mr. Parrott said.

Big Student Loan Plan Promised by Peterson

New legislation to assist university students, promised in the Throne Speech, will bring B.C. close to full implementation of the principle of universal financial standing.

The survey will be carried out by a technical specialist and an assistant sent from Ottawa, at no cost to B.C.

Mr. Peterson said that although B.C. had an excellent vocational and trades training program and university program for the professions, there was a category between the two which should be further investigated—the technicians.

"By way of example, there are engineering technicians, electronics technicians and dental technicians.

"These technicians receive less than a full university training, but an engineering technician, for example, would have enough engineering theory and mathematics to aid an engineer . . . With the

No Time for Ostriches

WHEN MR. JAMES MUIR, THE president of the Royal Bank of Canada, returned from a visit to Red China a few months ago, his report on economic progress in that country marked him as a man of liberal and objective viewpoint.

His comments this week on Canada's economic situation do nothing to dispel that impression. And when he says that this country is pricing itself out of world markets and that, in fact, "our prices are inflated to the point of explosive danger," it is only the course of wisdom to give his words some heed.

Finance Minister Fleming has chosen to discount Mr. Muir's assessment of the situation. The Federal Minister sees no justification for saying there is an inflationary crisis here. He says the Government has taken a "serious view" of inflationary pressures, but implies there is no cause for alarm.

The question arises, how serious must a situation get before it becomes alarming?

The Canadian price index stood at 126.2 as of December 1, a rise of 3.1 over December 1957. In other words the dollar of each Canadian — each pensioner, each holder of life insurance, each owner of a savings deposit account, each wage earner — is worth nearly three cents less than it was a year ago.

Bank interest earnings have just about kept even with the fall in value of savings deposits. Savings have in effect earned no interest at all year.

Since 1949, just ten years ago, the year on which the price index is based, inflation has been 26.2 per cent. Is this something to watch seriously but not to consider as a crisis, to use Mr. Fleming's phrase?

Mr. Muir has done well to bring the situation once more before Canadians, in forceful, graphic words.

Increased international trade, he says, is one answer to our problem. Yet our costs of production make our prices too high for most foreign customers to pay. And, although Mr. Muir did not stress the point, our federal policy of increased protection discourages imports, raises prices for Canadian consumers, and makes it more difficult for possible foreign customers to buy from us.

"A little self-examination and realistic thinking," says the bank president, "should cause us to question whether it is feasible to base our labor and other costs on those of the United States, a country with massive production and a huge home market which is actually more than ten times as large as our own."

We should quit fooling ourselves that we are an economic giant, he says, when actually we have urgent need to watch our pennies.

Mr. Fleming apparently chooses not to view as a crisis the fact that the Federal Government is having trouble trying to sell its bonds, that higher interest will have to be offered, and that when the banks — which have been the heavy purchasers of the latest national issues — attempt to pass these on to the public an additional inflationary force will be loosed on the economy.

Mr. Muir proposes several means of improving our situation: Bringing down production costs, expanding trade with Russia and China, expanding trade with South America and the Commonwealth in order to avoid being left "frozen out" of the increasing number of exclusive trading blocs, retaining the goal of incentive in encouraging investment, investigating proposals for free trade arrangements with Britain and the United States even if this is confined to limited fields.

The advantages of mass production can only be realized if sales can be made on the broadest possible market, Mr. Muir points out. Canada is striving to achieve these advantages, yet is putting one obstacle after another in the way of freer international exchange of goods.

If this is not building up to a crisis, it is difficult to attach any meaning to the word. It can hardly be enough for the Federal Government to continue taking a "serious view" of the situation while it continues to contribute to the seriousness. Only this week the Federal Government admitted that it has imposed increased restrictions on the import of certain cotton goods. This follows increased controls on woollens and several other import items, as well as measures to impose arbitrary valuations for duty purposes.

Inflation today is not confined to Canada; its advent cannot be blamed on the Government in power or on its predecessor. But it is certainly the responsibility of Mr. Diefenbaker's administration to make every effort to confine and reduce its effects. Denying its critical nature will only keep our heads in the sand.

A Most Popular Service

MR. LLOYD BROOKS, OF THE provincial Recreation and Conservation Department, may not be right in his theory that people are turning to camping in order to escape television commercials, but there can be no argument about his contention that the public is flocking to the government camp sites in increasing numbers.

Vancouver Island boasts several excellent camp sites established by the Department. Numerous others are to be found on the mainland. Together with sites for picnicking only, these facilities provide the public with tables, benches, a cooking grill and space to set up a tent. Water and firewood are available, and the camp is usually located within reach of a waterfall, pool, lake or other scenic attraction.

With more and more of the outdoors being set aside for industrial or private use, these reserved camp sites serve an invaluable purpose in permitting families to enjoy their forests and streams. The summer use of the establishments is eloquent testimony to the popularity which they enjoy.

As at present constituted, they provide just the right atmosphere of roughing it with the necessary facilities, to make camping a pleasure. They are open to the public without charge — a recognition that the forests belong to the people. And the public in general responds by taking an owner's care of them.

This is one of the finest services provided by the Provincial Government, and should be given every encouragement.

More Trouble With BB Guns

SOME TIME AGO LEGAL action was taken to curb the use of airguns by juveniles.

Cases are on record in which careless practice with the weapons has caused serious injury. In other instances windows and street-lights have been broken by thoughtless young marksmen, and dogs as well as other domestic pets have been used as targets.

Apparently, however, one type of BB gun was not covered in the restrictive legislation. The Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council has drawn attention to that omission and asks that complementary legislation be passed to plug the loophole.

The PTA group is to be commended on its action. It is to be hoped no time will be lost in establishing the necessary legal controls over these weapons.

They Serve

IT IS A COMMON SIGHT AT public gatherings and sports events to see one or more men or women in the neat white-piped black uniforms of the St. John Ambulance Brigade standing quietly by.

They are there in case they are needed. Frequently an emergency call is made for them and they swing into action with a dispatch which has made the brigade a symbol of efficiency.

Last year, according to records kept by the organization, the 100 local members put in 6,000 hours at their various self-assumed tasks. Reckoned on a professional basis, that is a very substantial contribution to the community, which the community repays in part through the Community Chest.

The work of the Brigade, however, is not measured in money. The voluntary services its members give, be it in stand-by duty, in providing first aid when necessary, in training groups in home nursing or emergency work, reflect a dedication to a cause.

Greater Victoria is indebted to the group for its service and is infinitely better off, as a community, for having such men and women giving practical demonstrations of the ideal which inspires them.

As Our Readers See It

Not Sons of Canada View

The members of Victoria Assembly, No. 1, Native Sons of Canada, take this opportunity to advise our readers that Mr. Bernard Glaum of Toronto is not the vice-president of the Native Sons of Canada, and that his opinions or remarks regarding the forthcoming visit of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth to her Kingdom of Canada were entirely his own and expressed without the authority of the national council (of which, it is understood, he is not a member) of the Native Sons of Canada.

It might interest your readers to learn that members of this society are pledged to uphold the constitution of Canada in which Her Majesty occupies a most important position; also, that this society (despite malicious rumors to the contrary) long ago, through its national council, declared its opinion that Canada should not secede from the Commonwealth nor seek union with the United States of America. However, they want a national flag to typify Canada's sovereignty.

FROM WASHINGTON

Too Short a Bridge for the Big Missile Gap

NIKITA KHRUSHCHEV'S announcement that the Soviets have an intercontinental ballistic missile "in serial production" is only one more item in a mounting mass of ugly evidence. All the evidence suggests that the Eisenhower administration has been basing its own defence plans on a grossly over-optimistic picture of Soviet missile progress. Even before the Khrushchev speech to the Party Congress, there was disquiet about the matter inside the Administration. A review had already been ordered. If common sense prevails, the review now ought to lead to a sharp upward revision of the so-called "national estimates" of the Soviet missile program, by the inter-agency committee charged with churning out these half-magical figures.

Meanwhile the story of the false estimates is remarkably instructive. The story begins — so far as one can see through the thick curtains of secrecy — with a seemingly logical search for a measuring stick of Soviet missile development.

As is well known, this country has for some years possessed the means to keep a radar-watch on Soviet medium and long-range missile tests. In 1957, probably when the first Soviet ICBM test was observed, a question was asked of the American missile industry and missile experts.

The question was, how many tests would be needed, in order to reach the stage when an ICBM could reasonably be ordered into full production. Being relatively inexperienced, the industry and the experts agreed that a large number of tests would be required.

This requirement, for many tests before Soviet ICBM production could begin, was therefore cranked into the machinery that makes the "national estimates."

Hence the alarm occasioned by the first Soviet ICBM test was rapidly replaced by the smug complacency when the radar-watching machinery failed to report numerous continuing tests.

To date, in fact, no more than five full-range tests of Soviet ICBMs have been surely identified. The last undoubted test was in April, 1958, although there is some possibility that what was taken for an unsuccessful moon shot in July was in reality another test.

For a very long time, everyone used the argument that the Soviets could not be anywhere near the production-stage in their ICBM program because of the fewness of their long-range tests; and this argument, incredible as it may seem, is still being cheerfully repeated by Secretary of Defence Neil McElroy and others.

This seems incredible precisely because Secretary McElroy's own missile program long ago revealed that the argument was without foundation.

Khrushchev has now announced that the Soviet ICBM is indeed in full-scale production. And since the last certain test was in April, it is only prudent to assume that the Soviet ICBM actually went into production some time last spring.

Any such assumption makes nonsense of the low estimates of future Soviet ICBM stocks that Secretary McElroy and his staff gave to the Senate Armed Services Committee — with such apparent assurance. By all-out effort (which is not being made) our own Atlas can now be produced at the rate of 15 per month.

A similar potential output must be assumed for the first production line of the great Soviet missile-manufacturing complex in the Dniepropetrovsk area. It must also be assumed that the Soviets will open a second production line as soon as possible, if they have not done so already.

On these assumptions — the minimum assumptions consistent with security — the Soviets ought to have a stock of at least 300 ICBMs at the end of this year, instead of the mere 100 Secretary McElroy told the Senators about.

On these assumptions, the Soviets should also be producing ICBMs at a rate of 500 per annum by 1960-61, instead of reaching this output in 1962, as Secretary McElroy forecast. On these assumptions, in short, the missile gap which the Defence Department has been trying to smear over with soothing syrup, is actually a bigger gap than the alleged addicts of gloom and doom have hitherto suggested.

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG

The Annual Epidemics Were No Respectors of Persons

THIS is about the time of year when epidemics of chickenpox, measles and mumps used to run through Victoria schools like a fire through a dry pine forest. There have been times, indeed, when it seemed half the classes, at Boys' Central would be away home sick with one of these afflictions. And the astonishing thing is how little concerned we were with our illnesses. So much so that it requires a feat of memory to recall even the painful swelling of a good case of mumps. In our family, which could be counted on to have at least three brothers at school in any given year, the visitation of any one of these childhood infections could result in anywhere from four to six weeks away from school.

Whoever first contracted the disease was a hero to the rest of us — and we carefully watched the development of telltale spots of chickenpox or the glandular swelling of mumps.

When the infection was diagnosed a colored card was tacked to the front of the house and we were quarantined. This, however, was quite easily circumvented when it is remembered that almost inevitably other children on the same street, or on neighboring streets, would also be proud possessors of pocked or blotched skins because those annual epidemics of infectious diseases were no respectors of persons but ran rapidly through the city when this century was young.

So nothing was easier than to skin over the back fence and duck through a couple of backyards to link up with other "victims" of whatever infection was at that time interrupting our march toward our academic goals.

Strangely enough I was lightly touched by all three of the most common of the infections, chickenpox, measles and mumps — in fact I developed only one "mump" if that may describe a swelling on one side of my throat which gave my face a lopsided and silly look.

Actually it wasn't nearly as much fun as we had hoped, to be freed from the slavery of school for several days.

After a very short time we were bored, cranky and must have been unutterable nuisances to our mothers who, goodness knows, had quite enough to do in trying to get the weekly wash dry, to do the shopping — phones were very scarce — and keep some sort of order in houses that seemed to be overflowing with sick or convalescent young savages.

And surely our teachers must have found the disruption to the orderly curriculum a tremendous difficulty as the pupils disappeared as though spirited away in sections to vanish behind their quarantine cards.

Surely, too, poor Dr. Wasson, the schools' medical officer, must often have despaired of ever keeping up with what must have appeared to be the ubiquitous scourges of a winter season.

But this trine of winter infections was mild and almost innocuous by comparison with epidemics of scarlet fever and diphtheria which flourished only too often in sections of the city where slimy surface drains carried contamination in shallow ditches along the road-sides.

Then Mr. Wilson, the city's sanitary officer, was busy night and day, racing in his light, rubber-tired buggy behind the fastest little bay mare in all Victoria — not even excepting Fire Chief Tom Watson's horse. He was a big, florid, red-haired man and a great cigar smoker (perhaps he thought his strong cigars had a germicidal effect).

And if one had contracted scarlet fever one was whisked out to the old isolation hospital which stood just about where the veterans' hospital now stands, and was soon safely bestowed behind its high-board fence. Some called it "the pest house," which may have been a bit unkind but not too far off the mark.

Once inside the isolation hospital the little victims were truly isolated and parents could pass in little parcels through a big wooden gate after reaching in through a hole and ringing a brass cowbell.

Of course the whole building simply reeked of disinfectant which I think must have been a strong solution of carbolic acid.

And back in the victim's home Mr. Wilson was assiduously burning sulphur on the kitchen stove and fumigating each room of the house. It may have had very little effect on the scarlet fever virus but to anyone who has ever smelled burning sulphur in a closed room the psychological effect must have been tremendous.

BUT WHO RUNS THE COMPANY?

We All Know All There Is to Know About Education

I EXPECT you have been interested to hear what different people have had to say recently on the perennial topic of education. I know I have. It's always instructive to learn what other people think is wrong with an institution which looms large in one's own life. We have all been to school, ourselves; our children are at school now; so we all know all there is to know about education. Right?

We all have automobiles, too. Years ago, when we were young the old jalopy seemed to do everything that was asked of it, didn't it? Gradually, though, as the family grew, the performance seemed to fall off, until now it is definitely unsatisfactory.

We've tried everything. When we took the problem to a garage in the States they suggested that everything would be better if we discarded brakes and clutch, put the teenagers separately in the trunk and motored aimlessly across country, ignoring the highway altogether.

The European manufacturers offered a high-class machine, but we were afraid it would prove too dear to buy, and too expensive to run. Lately, though, our own economy model doesn't seem to be giving us the mileage we had hoped for, and we are beginning to wonder if we are not perhaps paying rather a lot for a mediocre performer.

The staff of the nearest oil and service station are a very cheerful and hardworking crowd. They work overtime to keep the old 'bus going, but they say they aren't allowed to carry out any very radical repair. Apparently the owners of the chain tell them to keep on putting in gas, oil and water and everything will be all right. You ask who the boss is, and nobody seems to know.

The service crew get better pay than they used to, but they could still do with more. They don't like having to run the lunch counter and clean the rest rooms in their spare time, and they feel that their importance to society might be better recognized if they were thought of as engineers rather than as a mixture of greasable-baby-sitter-psychiatrist/charm-school-operator and short-order cook.

But their biggest gripe is that even when they get to manage the service station the company still keeps them holed up. You ask again who runs the company, and nobody seems to know.

Well, we say, it's our car, isn't it? And if we don't know what's wrong with it, who does, eh? So we get a reply in the mail from A Spokesman of the Company. He says we are misinformed about the Scope and Nature of the Problem.

He says that not only is there nothing wrong with our car's performance, but it outperforms all others, four to one, by scientific test. He uses a lot of automotive jargon that makes us feel pretty ignorant, and after a while we give up arguing, because he knows and we know that the Company has a monopoly.

His best argument, though, is a very simple one. He says we could improve our performance a little (so it appears) — not quite perfect yet — by some very expensive repairs, which would double the garage bill, and this alarms us considerably.

The heck of it is that we don't seem to be able to get to see the high-ups in this mysterious company. Some people say that Mr. Big is the man who runs University Motors; others are sure it is old Joe Public who operates the Democrat Bus Garage at the corner of Pursestring and Millrate — he's getting on in years and has no kids of his own to put-through school.

I've even heard it said that the real boss is to be found somewhere in the back office of the Civil Service Station down there on what used to be Government. The guy in the front office changes from time to time, though it always seems to be one of the Boss's favorite nephews. It must be a pretty good job at that, because it more or less runs itself, and you don't need to have any special knowledge.

Perhaps that's the secret of the whole trouble. I don't know enough about the innards of my jalopy to tell if I'm being brushed off with a line of sales talk when the experts give me that stuff about "junior hydromatic" and "scientifically-controlled homeostatic adjustment". None of my friends know much more, so I guess we must have to take it on trust.

I must tell you, though, about something that happened the other day when we were out for a drive with the family. There's so many of us now in the old buggy that it's pretty well impossible to operate the controls. When we come to a hill or any rough going, we go up backwards with our eyes shut, but navigation is made easier by the fact that everyone shouts directions, and anyhow you can follow the tracks of the other traffic. It's not as though we were going anywhere in particular.

We don't dare to go too fast along the straight and level because some of the kids get carsick, and we have to keep stopping for them, but we manage to keep ahead of the new American cars somehow, especially those with western licence plates.

What did shake us, though, as I started out to tell you, was this old-fashioned-looking, square-sided black European job that went past us like a rocket, leaving us just as if we were standing still. One of the kids who caught a glimpse of the badge on the back said it looked like a red hammer and sickle.

It certainly gave us a scare, going by at that speed, though the driver looked as if he knew where he was headed. Now I'm thinking seriously about trading in our old jalopy, whatever the cost — but I don't know whom to turn to for advice about the new cars. Do you?

"... Furthermore ... we protest the insolence of those who suggest that our city is not important enough for at least one H-bomb ..."

The Worm Turns

THE customary dignity and repose of the Court of Appeal was rudely shattered the other day by an unusually vehement outburst by that noted jurist, Mr. Justice Cauliflower.

SILENUS

The court had just delivered a number of reserved judgments, and was settling down to the first case of its day's agenda, when His Lordship uttered a loud expletive and threw the heavy appeal book which he had been reading at the head of one of counsel sitting below him. (It raised a nasty lump behind the ear; court officials, when questioned, allowed as to how they had never seen such accurate aim in the court since the days of Chief Justice Foghorn, sitting in Admiralty.)

After order had been to some extent restored, Mr. Justice Cauliflower leaned forward, and addressed the damaged barrister in the following terms:

"I am sorry that it happened to be you, Mr. Briefbender, for you look like a reasonable sort of person. It is unfortunate that your appeal book had the word (ugh!) finalized right on the first page. See Index, line 23. Since this sitting commenced my feeling for the language of Milton and Shakespeare (to say nothing of Herrick, Swift, Graham Greene and a host of others) has been subject to continual attrition from the documents which learned counsel have been submitting to us. Things have been personalized, sanitized, and, of course, finalized."

LONDON LETTER

Eden's Rise and Fall

By WALLACE REYBURN

LONDON—Forthcoming from Randolph Churchill in the space of the next couple of months—two important biographies.

The first—Rise and Fall of Sir Anthony Eden. Already published extracts from it stirred up a fine old rumour, including a special statement levelled at Randolph from the Foreign Office, the sort of publicity an author might dream of buying but never could.

When the book itself comes out, it is likely to win a place as the most provocative book of 1939 that no other book in the rest of the year can catch up with.

Hard on the heels of the Eden biography will be a massive tome on the life of the late Lord Derby, racing man and longtime big power in the Conservative party.

Why all this time and energy expended on these two painstaking biographies? It seems Randolph wants to fulfill a big ambition. As someone close to him has put it: "He wants to establish his name as a serious biographer. That would make him eligible as his father's official biographer when the time came."

Rex Harrison has been talking things over with Alan Lerner and Fritz Loewe, who turned Pygmalion into My Fair Lady.

"I, for one, have had enough of it. It is no use your taking to heart the advice which was given to Boswell, 'Do not trouble yourself about the documents which you place before us; for indeed it is casting pearls before swine!' I would remind the profession that those words were spoken by a Scottish judge, and as we all know (having just been through the annual Celtic saturday devoted to the memory of a... ah... shall we say national poet...) as we all know, the language of Scotland is a curious and intransigent dialect from which it is, for all practical purposes, impossible to extract a literary pearl. Here in British Columbia, our language is modelled upon that of the mellifluous Sassenach. Apart from the inevitable contagion of dismal, polyglot which is wafted up from the frontier, it stands today more or less good Anglo-Saxon-Norman-French-Latin."

"Against the forces which tend to corrupt this noble language by making verbs out of adverbs and nouns, the courts, as the ultimate bastion of civilization, must stand firm. Give the barbarians an inch, and they will take a mile. The next thing you know they'll be funeralizing you."

"In this court we must have decent English. I would be the last to expect prose of a very high order, refreshing and diverting as it would be, in the formal mold which our matchless procedure places upon the verbosity of lawyers. But there must be limits. Any word which is not in any of the 27 volumes of the Oxford Dictionary is beyond the pale, and I will not read it. The result will be that the judicial process will be suspended until counsel are intelligible. Gentlemen, govern yourself accordingly."

"Now, as soon as Mr. Briefbender gets himself first-aided, we will proceed!"

But his words fell on an empty room. The Bar had retired en masse to the library, to amend briefs.

Object under discussion: Which other of Shaw's plays would make a good subject for a musical? And it seems the one they feel the most likely is Caesar and Cleopatra. Call Me Cleo?

An organization that really has male fashions at heart, the Wholesale Clothing Manufacturers' Federation decries the fact that Prince Philip cuts no ice as a style-setter. "He's a neat dresser, that's all," they say. "He has no flair for fashion."

According to the federation, the well-dressed Englishman is dead. No longer does he provide the model for the rest of the world's men.

"England has lost her long-held reputation for sartorial splendor. We need someone to give the lead like the former Prince of Wales, who pioneered the wide-spread collar, the Windsor knot, the Fair Isle sweater, and so on."

And Prince Philip, it appears, has shown no sign of making any diversion from strict fashion rules that the man in the street regards as copiable.

Old stuff to you over there but a novelty to folks here—a drive-in restaurant. There had never been one in England until this year, when down in Slough, just outside London, motorists had the strange experience of trays being brought out to them and clipped onto their car doors.

Education Minister Leslie Peterson feuded with leaders of the CCF and Liberal parties in the legislature Friday.

He told Opposition Leader Robert Strachan he would "deal with him at arm's length" from now on. Any inquires from him, he can request on the order paper.

The minister then charged Liberal Leader Arthur Laing with untruths in a speech Mr. Laing gave at Qak Bay last month.

Mr. Laing's statements were "irresponsible and false," the minister said.

The blow-up with Mr. Strachan followed a speech by the Opposition leader Monday. Mr. Strachan said he had asked for information on school-board budgets and the minister said the budgets belonged to the school boards, and he should write them for the answers.

NO CO-OPERATION

Mr. Strachan said he did so but the education minister also wrote all the boards and indicated his unwillingness to co-operate.

Mr. Peterson replied that in fact he had furnished Mr. Strachan with names and addresses of proper contacts in each school district. Mr. Strachan had told the school boards, said the minister, that he had been refused co-operation of the education department.

"This was putting politics ahead of education," said Mr. Peterson. Mr. Strachan would be dealt with at arm's length.

"Is that a threat?" asked Mr. Strachan. "Are you refusing to give me information?"

"He knows his right to ask me questions here on the order paper," said the minister.

"Once a year," replied Mr. Strachan.

COULDN'T INTERRUPT

The education minister then turned to Mr. Laing, who doesn't have a seat in the House and couldn't interrupt.

Mr. Laing said Jan. 14 that the B.C. government had refused to approve a $2,600,000 school building by-law in Richmond, that Richmond bonds from a previous building program were still unsold, and that the school district should borrow $450,000 from a bank and make minor additions to school it had now.

Mr. Peterson produced a letter from Richmond School Board stating it had never been impeded in the slightest by lack of funds, the department of education had co-operated in every instance, and the board "views with distaste the interference of its affairs into the political arena, and disassociates itself, without qualification, from the reported statements of Mr. Laing."

up by a similar amount. Both items indicate, not hand to mouth living, but reasonably comfortable living.

Are we as badly off as we think? Or are we being panicked into thinking conditions are shocking when in fact they are not much different from other years when no effort was made to conduct Do-It-Now campaigns.

The fact that a government agency is behind the Winter Work campaigns makes one wonder, particularly in view of the amount of political hay which is being made from the situation. And to say nothing of the offers of aid for winter work which the government has offered.

The whole situation has a false ring. Perhaps times are bad only because we have allowed ourselves to be convinced that they are bad.

Sidney-on-Sea

SIDNEY REVIEW—Several weeks ago, during the busy Christmas season, a letter came from the pen of a retired Sidney gentleman and his suggestion has much to commend it. He urged that the village be renamed "Sidney-On-Sea."

In addition to Sidney, British Columbia, there is Sidney, Manitoba. Then the situation becomes even more confusing because most people today don't worry about such trivial things as spelling. Sidney, Nova Scotia, is often confused with Sidney, B.C. Then there is Sydney, Australia. Just how many Sidney's there are, only those who know but a friend or so very long ago sent us a newspaper published in Sidney, South Dakota.

Really Bad?

COMMON DISTRICT FREE PRESS—Two interesting points have come out of the early days of the parliamentary session in Victoria and both concern figures.

One shows that B.C. spent $2,000,000 more on liquor last year than in 1937 and in the same year the sales tax was

WEEKEND WEATHER PICTURE ACROSS CANADA

SYNOPSIS—A strong ridge of high pressure blankets the province and the storm track now lies in a south to north direction a few hundred miles offshore. A series of systems moving along this line will bring varying amounts of cloud to western B.C. during the next two days but precipitation should be confined to the north coastal area. In eastern parts of the province many valleys are reporting thin cloud and low levels but the sun should break through at times and there should be quite pleasant but fairly cool weekend weather.

A WRITER'S DIARY

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

ABOUT ONCE A WEEK I meet somebody who pities or despises me because I am a newspaperman. Quite a number of them are elderly people who think it a shame that so charming a youth as myself should have wandered into a shabby trade. Others are very young writers who see in me a grizzled drudge who might have made a modest mark if he had not wasted his energies writing for the blats.

I am unperturbed. I like newspapers and would not exchange the raffish charm of my craft for the moral splendor which enfolds insurance salesmen and the clergy, or the ennobling consciousness of poverty and dedication which glows from the countenances of school teachers and policemen.

As for newspaper work ruining a writer, I agree that unremitting slavery extended over many years would certainly do so, but I have never known a journalist who was good at his job who was a slave for long.

Journalism Nurtured Great Names

I enjoy hurling at these haughty youths who are too dainty for the newsman's toll a list of their betters who have not scorned it. Daniel Defoe, Samuel Johnson, Addison, Steele, Hazlitt, Leigh Hunt, Charles Lamb, Sidney Smith, Dickens, Thackeray, Bernard Shaw, Max Beerbohm, Arnold Bennett, Chesterton, Belloc, Neville Cardus, Ernest Newman, Dame Rebecca West.

I could go on for several lines more, but I am not paid to make catalogues—these did not scorn the work of journalism. Who am I to do so? And who is little Master-Inky?

Paws to think that a newspaper job would take the edge off his style?

The writers who really annoy me are those who consent to write for newspapers, but not to write their best. They are saving their best for posterity.

They remind me of Chumley Frink, the poet in "Babbitt" who said, "Now, I like to give a high-class lecture, and read some of my best poetry—not the newspaper stuff, but the magazine things." A writer either writes as near to his best as he can every time he goes to work, or he is a crook.

Essence of Style Is Lucidity

This outburst is provoked by an excellent book written by Theodore M. Bernstein, assistant managing editor of the New York Times, called "Watch Your Language" (Channel Press, $4.95).

Mr. Bernstein is a good critic of style, and he seeks to encourage in Times men that lucidity which is the essence of style. He is a conservative grammarian, for which I honor him; grammar is both the skeleton and the nervous system of language. He insists on the precise use of words, which is difficult in an age when classical education is waning.

He fights those enemies which are familiar to all editors—the Monoceros, or one-horned dilemma, the mortician who seeks to displace the undertaker, "advance planning" (as though the past were not, alas, incapable of rearrangement), and the "swiftness of use of words."

He has no patience with Nice Nelly's Delight—the use of the word "attacked" for "raped."

His example is entertaining: "An autopsy showed that the girl had been strangled manually, but had not been attacked." This reminds me of the British euphemism for rape—"interfered with," as in "The body had been beheaded with a meat-axe, but not interfered with."

Mr. Bernstein also crusades against that legal horror "and/or" and the foolish expression "personal friend."

Clear Thinking First Attribute

He is a newspaperman on a high level, but it is a level toward which all honest journalists strive. Sometimes their striving does no good, because they lack the first quality of a writer—they cannot think clearly.

Clear thinking makes clear writing. If grammar, a serious respect for words, and some hint of the genius of the language are also present, and can be developed.

This matter of the genius of the language is important; it is a feeling for what the language does best; it is the propriety which keeps a man from writing "English" as though it were Latin (which is what many writers try to do), and which steers him away from bestialities like the present craze for the suffix "wise."

It is calamitous, stylewise. Can anybody learn to write well? No, but most people can learn to write better than they do. Nowadays virtually everybody writes something or other, and the notion has gained currency that if you write simply, as you speak, you will write well enough for your purpose.

Egregious delusion! Few people speak simply, because they do not think simply; they do not think simply because their minds are filled with complex trivialities; their minds are thus cluttered because they have little regard for the meanings of words and the subtleties of language. To think simply is the last attainment of the disciplined mind.

No wonder writing is hard.

CANADIANA: The foregoing recalls the heart-cry of that great Canadian editor, Nicholas Flood Davin, who established the Regina Leader, and who wrote East in 1879: "For God's sake send me two reporters who write like Daniel Defoe! If only my paper approached the limpid purity of 'Robinson Crusoe' I might truly say that I had made the desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose."

SEARCH FOR ANALOGY

Australian Writer Has Continental Touch

By ROY PERROTT

Patrick White, the Australian novelist, is the kind of writer who provokes reviewers into a desperate search for analogies. So far as it goes, that is some measure of his size. Some penetrating hewers, luckily, have already been hard at work down the analogy-mine with White's later and greater books, The Tree of Life and Voss. Now an early work, The Aunt's Story (Eyre and Spottiswoode), and the question is still open. Who is he like?

D. H. Lawrence has been well mentioned and not only because both have written books about Australia which makes it seem something more than a distant suburb in the southern postal districts. White, like Lawrence up to a point, is ruthlessly prejudiced in favor of people with souls; and he has a delicate malice for those who move in small circles playing the world's game too well.

Also among White's likenesses, one reads, are "something of Tolstoy" for his scope; also Miss Compton-Burnett and Firbank: An interesting start to any list.

DEDICATED

White is on the side of obsessed, driven people, the gaunt introverts with their spirits in their boots. But as a foil to these, to mark out the frontiers of virtue decisively, he is also a dedicated student of the mannered and the meaningless.

He is like an explorer who comes back with the dust of far places on him, who likes to sit about in drawing-rooms, amazed but delighted with the irony, to see that people do not know about the continent faintly discernible through the lace curtains.

EYE FOR DETAIL

This gift of the two-sided approach is what makes him an often exciting writer. His big continental touch can expand a drawing-room as though it were pneumatic, all in a sentence. His eye for detail makes characters look real when they are out in the open spaces.

"The Aunt's Story" is about a woman's gradual decline into madness. We see the heroine, Theodora Goodman, as a plain, introspective girl apparently resigned to loneliness.

On the strength of her odd, oracular utterances, her even more pregnant silences, we are meant to see that she has some unrealized spiritual force which makes her a giant among pygmies.

White gives some of the pygmies a sound whipping

ART IN REVIEW

By MONCRIEFF WILLIAMSON

Fine Art of Silkscreen Not Simple as It Looks

I was browsing around upstairs in The Marionette bookshop this week. Not looking for anything in particular, but I was upstairs because that's where you find the art department.

The Marionette's energetic, vivacious proprietor, Gwen Scott was busy stocktaking and the floor was suitably littered with piles of books. Stocktaking in a bookshop's art department! One can imagine a few more pleasant occasions for voluntary assistance. Had I had more time at my disposal, and had I not been subconsciously goaded by the speeding minutes of the parking meter, I might have stayed for the rest of the day.

Gwen Scott's personal interest in art and artists makes the small upstairs room at The Marionette a rather special place. Few booksellers care to tie up capital in art books unless they feel confident of at least a nominal return for their investment.

Very wisely, Miss Scott has approached this luxury branch of the book trade with canny Scottish caution, fully aware of the growing interest in art matters generally, and particularly in Victoria. Part of the secret of her success is her awareness that, for more and more people, art is not just a luxury but a necessity—a way of life.

Knows Art

Her own deep sense of appreciation is only too evident when she opens a folio to show one a set of choice reproductions of Vlaininck's paintings. She is not just a person showing a set of prints; she is somebody who has studied art and can explain why it is that these prints are in her shop.

And so it is with the art books. They are chosen partly because of demand, which is logical in a bookshop; but they are chosen for the additional reason because they will add knowledge and enjoyment, and not merely serve as ornaments.

One of the books I noticed was a handbook on the process of silkscreen printing. Now silkscreen printing is an art which flummoxes many unsuspecting folk because it looks so darned simple. I other printing procedures far above the ruts of dullness. And we have W. D. West. It was in The Marionette this week that I saw once again the varied examples of Bill West's delicate and sensitive skill. They were all works which I had seen before, either at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, in the B.C. Centennial Anthology or in the Artist Teachers exhibition at the UBC Fine Arts Gallery last fall. They are works which grow with acquaintance.

Abused

There was a time, a few years back in London, when the announcement: "I've just made a serigraph frame, old chap. I wish you'd pop round to the studio and see what Monica and I produced last night after supper..." Well, it was enough to make any number of friendships wilt.

The explanation, the justification for one's irritability, lay in dislike for seeing a "good thing" abused. The upsurge of interest in silkscreen or serigraph prints since the end of Second World War has been, in artistic circles, almost as contagious as the Hula-hoop and Scrabble.

Siebner and West

Fortunately, serious artists have brought to the revival of this most ancient of Oriental printing processes a Twentieth Century sophistication which is wholly endearing, enduring and worthwhile. Although there are many, many artists who practise silk screen with an outwardly satisfactory effect, there are but a few in each country who excel in their mastery of this most complex art.

In Victoria we have Herbert Siebner who can utilize the silkscreen, the monotype and

FOR THE LIFE OF ME, by Robert Briscoe, Little Brown & Co., $5.50, 340pp.

Well, shure, for a Hebrew who is Irish, who hates England but respects her, who raises money from the U.S. to fight the battles of the Irish Republican Army, makes trade with pre-war Germany, runs guns, conducts a successful business... well, he adds up to some fellow.

This is Briscoe, former Lord Mayor of Dublin, author, but many, many things more.

Ever meet a respectable swashbuckler? You will in this book.

One of the most interesting aspects of the writing, apart from the heroics involved, is an exemplification of the "free" Irish attitude concerning England, not illuminated as a democracy in the Irish mind.

Conflict between north and south Ireland is practically nil, author Briscoe indicates; the rub, and a sore one not yet salved, is between Southern Ireland and the people who think they should be a part of little old England, notably, the English.

He makes his point. Illuminating is the method by which revolution must come about: oppression, and the slim, silly and somewhat stupid means revolutionaries take to fight the foe; and their success, is also here outlined, apparent and transparent.

You'll like Briscoe, pro or anti, his antics—as do members of the British House.—T.D.

with his irony for not being able to communicate with her. Unfair, certainly, and lesser writers would have made a good study of the injustice of life out of it. White simply soldiers on, throwing his assumptions about.

Theodora is the heroine even at the end when the story is crackling with fantasy. But this is a flying exercise in which the White eagle is still learning how to soar.

NEW YORK (UPI)—The author of one of this season's novels is Lee Cooley, a top TV producer in New York for a decade. The Sounding Board

By AUDREY St.D. JOHNSON

One of the most persistent subjects for discussion, controversy, letters to the editor, editorials and lampoons—e.g. CBC and "My Fur Lady"—is the lack of a distinctive flag.

It would seem that no reasonable person could deny that such a flag is past due to Canada; only the components of its design kindle heat, hostility and humor.

Like most Canadian-born and many others beside, I am all for it. In fact, I even hope to live long enough to see it wave and know that its symbols have contributed a little toward unifying this divergent people.

But I'd like to know, too, wherever I saw it, that something better than a lip-service brand of patriotism had hauled that flag aloft.

Pride in a nation grown to greatness within the span of a century is something for every Canadian citizen to share. But it should contain the humility and honesty to acknowledge those whose accomplishments have created the stature Canada owns today in the eyes of the world.

Not only the diplomats, politicians, businessmen, sportsmen.

The words of authors and journalists, the paintings and music-making of artists in every field, have done much to tell the world that Canada has rich resources in human material as well as what is mined from the earth and hewn from the forests.

How Deep Does Patriotism Go?

Here in Victoria this week we are to have an outstanding opportunity to exhibit the kind of patriotism that will make us worthy of the flag we hope to fly.

Three Canadian musicians who have made and are making important contributions to music on an international scale, are to perform here.

Next weekend, as soloist with the Victoria Symphony, contralto Maureen Forrester will pay her long-awaited visit to the city. I say long-awaited because I for one, have looked forward for the past three years, to this opportunity.

One of the golden voices of our age, Miss Forrester's superb artistry has met and conquered the challenge of Europe's great music centres where the world's most stringent music standards are held.

On Wednesday, Robin Wood and Winifred Scott will appear in a duo and solo piano recital. A great deal has already been told and said about these two who were the symphony's last soloists. But not a word of it has been too much or too effusive.

A Peculiar Point of View

It shows a shallow appreciation indeed—and a woeful lack of musical intelligence to claim that having heard these artists with the symphony, one is uninterested in the forthcoming recital.

The very reverse should be the case. There are many facets to a pianist's art that can only be fully enjoyed and realized without the distracting—though lovely—orchestral partner.

In fact, such a recital is in almost a different genre to the concerto performance and is something, in the light of all I have heard and know of Robin and Winifred, that I would not for the life of me, miss.

Having been somewhat discouraged by the above rumor, so damning to my fellow music-loving citizens' perspicacity, city council's acknowledgment that official recognition was due Robin Wood, came as a cheering note.

As to the one small dissenting voice—I am sure it was not the principle but the particular which the alderman opposed.

If Robin had bunched his fingers in a boxing glove on the international stage instead of spreading them over a keyboard, I'm sure the vote would have been unanimous.

The theme that underlies Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" has had as many lives as a cat. In different guises it has kept appearing down the centuries since Greek legend first evolved it and Ovid retold it in his "Metamorphoses."

Originally it was embodied in the myth of the sculptor, King of Cyprus who fell in

New Director Inspiration To Choristers

First rehearsal of Victoria Choral Society under direction of its new conductor, Stanley Hoban, was an electrifying experience, according to report. The dynamic and authoritative leadership combined with the fullest understanding of every aspect of vocal production stimulated the members of the choir to a fresh, lively response.

Rehearsals are held every Tuesday at 7.30 in the Memorial Hall, Vancouver Street. Those wishing to join should do so as soon as possible while there are still vacancies in all but alto sections of the choir.

Play Production Style Alters at Vic College

With a new, enlarged stage in their auditorium, Victoria College Players' Club will abandon its former "arena" style production technique for the forthcoming presentation of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness."

While productions of "The Lady's Not For Burning," "The Crucible," and "The Applecart," were interesting as given in the Ewing Building with the audience seated around the playing area, obvious difficulties made them less than fully satisfactory.

Adaptation of the auditorium's limited presentation stage facilities into an extended apron stage will result in a much more flexible production than was formerly possible in either of the former arrangements.

Due to the illness of Mrs. Flora Nicholson, who has guided the activities of the Players' Club for the past several years, Gil Bunch has been directing "Ah, Wilderness" since the Christmas vacation. However, Mrs. Nicholson resumed her duties this week and will carry on until production date which is set for Feb. 24.

The family comedy will run through the balance of that week, concluding on Saturday, Feb. 28.

TWO for the SHOW

By PHIL LEE

AA (Oscar Class) BB (Worthwhile)
A (Don't Miss) B (For Rainy Days)
C (To put in time)

(B) "A NICE LITTLE BANK THAT SHOULD BE ROBBED" (Odeon): Put together such proven comedians as Mickey Rooney, Tom Ewell and Mickey Shaughnessy and the results should be a lulu. Instead, 20th Century-Fox's "A Nice Little Bank That Should Be Robbed" turns out to be a booboo.

Based on an article by Evan Wylie the screenplay by Sydney Boehm unhappily roams the declensions, smells, smeller, flopi, stinkum, mainly because the plot isn't very funny in the first place and wears the sagging air of a game of charades played by grown-ups who would rather be outside trying to do something worthwhile.

Too bad, this, because the theme of bank robberies committed by gentlemen with toy or unloaded guns is quite topical these days and the two Rooney, Ewell and Shaughnessy carry out the duties. Unfortunately the in-between scenes are life with forced humor and unbelievable situations.

The plot is brief: Ewell is proprietor of a fix-it shop which is mortgaged to the hilt. Between supporting bookmaker Shaughnessy and would-be horse trainer Rooney, he and his fiancée of five years, Dina Merrill, stand small chance of getting married. Then Rooney gets the idea to rob a bank and the play is under way.

Second half of the Odeon's bill is "Hong Kong Confidential" starring Gene Barry. They end tonight.

Powerful Play Has Big Cast

A large cast of players has been selected by guest director, Mrs. Vera Trueman, for the Peninsula Players' coming production of "High Ground."

The play is a powerful drama about an attractive convicted murderer and her wardens who, en route to prison, are forced by floods to take shelter in a convent. Sister Mary Bonaventure's conviction of the girl's innocence leads the action to a moving climax.

Mary Lief will play Sister Bonaventure and Joan Hendrickson the girl, Sarat. Others in the cast will be Jennifer Williams, Pat Montgomery, Ailsa Rothery, Dorothy Raybourne, Florence Smith, Doris Scott, Larry Scardfield, Joe Lunn and Ken Smith.

HANS GRUBER CONDUCTS

Forrester, Meistersingers To Perform With Symphony

We have pleasure in making known to you the complete program for the pair of symphony concerts next weekend, at which the fabulous Maureen Forrester will be our honored guest artist. These repeat-concerts will begin with Virgil Thomson's Acadian Songs and Dances from "A Louisiana Story."

Following these, Miss Forrester comes on stage for the first time, to sing, with orchestra, of course, the "Five Songs for Dark Voice" by the young Canadian composer Harry Somers—a work that was commissioned in the 1956 Stratford Festival expressly for Miss Forrester's appearance there.

This will be followed by the orchestra playing The Swan of Tuonela, the famous little tone poem by Sibelius which is, in effect, a short musical dream for solo English horn with an accompanying orchestra consisting of the following strange instrumentation: oboe, bass clarinet, bassoons, four horns, three trombones, harp, timpani, bass drum, and no less than thirteen separate string voices.

Still in the first half, though concluding it, Miss Forrester comes out for the second and last time to sing that most moving work of Brahms, the Alto Rhapsody, for alto solo, male chorus and orchestra—the Meistersingers, Dudley Wickert, director, being the required male chorus.

The Alto Rhapsody is a setting to those ineffable words of Goethe's, Harzreise im Winter. And it is a composition in which Maureen Forrester has now joined the two other earlier, and most famous ex-ponents of it in having made it uniquely their own—Marian Anderson and the late lamented Kathleen Ferrier.

And like Ferrier, Maureen Forrester learned this work from perhaps the greatest living authority upon it—Bruno Walter, who also repeatedly invited Maureen Forrester to sing it under his direction all over the world, including the inaugural concert of Vancouver's first international festival last summer.

This Canadian-born and trained artist holds, incidentally a record unique in the hundred-and-ten-year history of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in having been re-engaged SIXTEEN times in the last five seasons to appear with it as soloist.

Following the intermission, Brahms again, this time represented by his last—the 4th—symphony.

AIRES FOR WHISTLING

By way of brief comment on all the above, there is no need to feel the slightest alarm at seeing the contemporary American composer's name—Virgil Thomson—on the program.

He is not, you see, represented here by one his own, original, "modern" compositions; but rather by his simple, clever, tasteful arrangements of some lovely Acadian folk songs for orchestra—chiefly for solo wood-wind, trumpet, viola and violin in turn, with the rest of the orchestra more or less in the background.

PHENOMENAL!

ABSOLUTELY PHENOMENAL!

CAN YOU SINGLE OUT A PAIR OF SOCKS?

Pity the owner of the socks on the line above. What with otherwise inevident, there is to say, that of all the socks only one pair of matching shown, only two, are exactly mates being lost, strayed, or hose in the entire group. That's all. Which two?

THIS IS NOT EASY FOR ADULTS

A kind of coloring puzzle that is distinctly not child's play is illustrated above. The problem is to color the group of 64 small squares with four different colors in such a way that four color designs are formed, each consisting of 16 squares and exactly of the same formation.

Names of the colors to be used are indicated by the letters B, Y, R and G, in four of the squares. They, of course, mean Blue, Yellow, Red and Green.

In working out each of the four color designs, which must be exactly alike in size and shape, include in each design the square that bears the initial letter which indicates the color to be used. Thus the square numbered 37, which contains the letter B, falls in the design of 16 squares which are to be colored blue.

After you have solved this, try working out another classic poser with crayons or colored pencils. Draw a design having 11 rows of 11 boxes

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16
17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31	32
33	34	35	36	37	38	39	40
41	42	43	44	45	46	47	48
49	50	51	52	53	54	55	56
57	58	59	60	61	62	63	64

each, or 121 in all. Now, using 11 different colors, color 11 of the boxes with each of the crayons so that no color appears twice in any vertical, horizontal or diagonal row.

NUMBER CONFUSION

The street number of a certain dwelling consists of four digits totaling 18. Total of the first two digits is one-half that of the last two. The first and the last digits are the same and the last digit is four times greater than the second. What is the number?

A KNOTTY QUESTION TO ANSWER

Stretch a ribbon about 18 inches long beside the edge of a table. Invite a bystander to pick it up, holding one end in each hand, and tie it in a knot without releasing either end. How can he do it?

Answer: Pick up the ribbon with the left hand, holding the right end in the right hand, and tie the knot.

ON THE ALLEYS

Team Events Start Sunday

By GRAHAM COX

Practice time has run out and teams entered in the city handicap tenpin championships get down to serious business at Strathcona Bowling Alleys Sunday.

The team event, the first of three in the championships will start Sunday morning at 10 with six teams fielded for an extra shift.

It was originally intended that team events would start at 12.45, but an entry of 52 teams forced tournament manager Ron Wilson to schedule the extra shift.

Princess Mary will be out to defend their title, but could run into a lot of trouble with the finer brand of kegling being exhibited on local lanes this season.

Shifts will be run at 10 a.m., 12.45 p.m., 3, 6.45 and 9.

The complete Sunday draw will be found at the end of the column.

Doubles and singles events of the championship are scheduled for next Sunday, again at Strathcona.

While we're at Strathcona, the high tenpin series of the week was rolled in the Senior League there when Sheldon Nipp ripped off a 611 (202, 231) series to lead Bud Falk's 550 (211), Art Manson 556 (206) and Tom Nute 571 (203).

In the Income Tax Fivepin League, Buck Schlievert had 860 (308,318) and Ross Mc-roy Begg rolled the second highest tenpin series of the week, a 608 (207, 209) in Gibson's Bowldrome's Senior League.

Behind him were Elmer Curtis 539 (202), Richard Lou 566 (212) Gil Wong 554 (211), Jack Fletcher 561 (210), Jack Nicol 562 (201), Jack Ferrie 572 (200) and Howie Bryan 551 (205).

Other high senior scores were Roy Bridger 562 (203), Ron Wilson 566, Ken Munn 552 (200), Nip Sage 555 (200) and Nick Howard 564 (226).

In the Commercial tenpin league, Howie Hazzard had 586 (201, 215), Jack Furmston 550, and Al Gellert 554. Richard Lou tossed the top mixed league score at 552 (208).

With the end of the second

With a full year of "championship" bowling behind them, Capital City Bowling Alley bosses Al Nelthorpe and Neil Craig have decided on a change.

Starting today, they have initiated a guaranteed $30 prize list. The weekly champion will take home at least $20 with the second place bowler receiving $5 and the high single bowler of the tourney winning $5.

The event will also go on television this week, with clips being shown early next week on CHEK-TV.

Roskamp set the pace at Capital City, too, with his 869 series while Stan Bell bowled 811 (373), 787, Harry Smith 834 (418), Emil Liska 800, 770, Cy Wallis 821, Jack Goldie 806, MAJOR TURLEY... with Jack Arterburn up.

Fate Keeps Major Home—And Away From Purses

By HAL MALONE

Victoria's horseman Don Carley has a $25,000 headache, all because of a letter he recently received from jockey Jack Arterburn.

Carley is the proprietor of Major Turley, a grey-coated, four-legged steed who last year enriched the Carley coffers by $9,300. His earnings came in the form of five wins and one second on B.C. racetracks. Other horses ran off more than the Major but none picked up more marbles, not even the leading older handicapper, Lord Renraw.

Following the B.C. season, Carley said he planned to campaign Major Turley in California where the purses are greener than here are here even if the grass isn't.

MONEY TALKS

His intention brought a warm glow to Arterburn, the tall young man who had piloted Turley to his successes and shared in the wealth. The rider of a stakes winner gets 10 per cent of the pot so Mr. Arterburn was naturally interested in the future health and wealthfare.

Heavy chores at his Victoria stable kept Carley from taking Major Turley south last fall. He passed up the Golden Gate and Tanforan meetings while Arterburn rode a few winners but nothing in the Major's class.

After the ponies moved to Santa Anita, Arterburn wrote to Carley. He pointed out that he had watched and ridden many of the top three-year-olds at Golden Gate and Tanforan.

"There wasn't one who could have touched the Major," said Arterburn. "That includes the colt that won a $25,000 stake. By not sending the Major down here, you cost yourself $25,000."

THERE'S MORE

The story should end here but it doesn't.

Six weeks ago Carley contacted a former Vancouver horseman, Jack Somersby, now living in California. He asked Somersby if he would handle the Major at the current Santa Anita meeting. Somersby agreed. Carley immediately put Major Turley in training, arranged to fly him south and began rubbing his hands in anticipation.

A month went by and no further word was heard from Somersby. Carley tried practically every means to locate him. Finally, he learned that Somersby and a stray auto had a misunderstanding outside San Mateo, Calif. The auto wasn't badly hurt but Somersby was. He suffered six broken ribs, a broken jaw and concussion.

All the while, Santa Anita has been chugging along and other three-year-olds have been carting home fat purses that Carley would have liked to reached for with the Major.

STILL HOPEFUL

Carley hasn't given up hope that Somersby will soon be sufficiently mobile to handle the Major. A letter is expected from Somersby any time. Carley plans to ask another former Vancouver horseman, Wally Dunn, to take over.

Among Dunn's flock is a fairly fast steed. Confidential

To date he has earned over $100,000 in purses. Carley doesn't know what other horses Dunn trains and he's worried that the trainer could be faced with the possibility of having the Major and some other horse eligible for the same race. Entering one horse and keeping the other, possibly the Major, in the barn, could embarrass Dunn and irritate the left-out owner.

But Carley feels that he has to make a move soon if he's ever going to find out just how good the Major is.

Carley knows, thanks to Mr. Arterburn, what he passed up by missing the Tanforan take. All he has to overcome to get one or more of those pleasing Santa Anita pots is Mr. Somersby's health, Mr. Dunn's inclination and Major Turley's ability and determination.

Nothing to it, you might say. Almost as easy as climbing up the west side of the Empress Hotel with your bare paws.

PIN POINTS... NO. 12

Wrist Remains Firm

This is the 12th of an instructional bowling series written for NEA Service and The Daily Times by tenpin champions.

By FRANK CLAUSE

As the fourth and sliding step is completed and the ball has ended its downward arc, you will find that the thumb automatically comes out of the ball with the fingers remaining in the holes a split-second longer.

The ball is "lifted" smoothly over the foul line from 4 to 20 inches out on the lane, as an airplane lands on a runway. As the ball is released, it passes close to the left ankle. The left leg is bent slightly at the knee and the body at the waist. The left arm is out away from the body to provide balance.

The right arm continues its swing in an arc. Don't pull back or stop the arm at the point of release. Stay with the ball over the foul line, keeping your head and body down and forward.

It is important during the release that the wrist remains firm, the thumb at the 10 o'clock position. Do not at any time get your hand on top of the ball in an effort to make it spin as this will produce a very ineffective ball.

The stuff on the ball comes from the grip of the fingers and the outward and upward motion of the hand and arm.

NEXT: The follow through.

FINAL TOUCH

Bowler of 47 perfect games, Frank Clause "lifts" ball smoothly over foul line.

Second Straight 66 Sends Sanders Ahead

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Doug Sanders of Miami Beach, Fla., fired his second successive 66, six strokes under par, and grabbed the lead in the second round of the $20,000 San Diego Open Golf Tournament Friday with a 36-hole total of 132.

The 25-year-old professional, who won the Western Open last year and the Canadian Open while he was still an amateur in 1956, toured the par 36-72 Mission Valley Country Club course in 32-34-66 to move into a one-stroke lead.

Among Canadian entries, Stan Leonard of Vancouver was the only one to qualify for the final rounds. He shot a 74 Friday to go with his 68 in the opening round for a 142 total.

Mike Souchak, Grossinger, N.Y., had 32-36-68 for 133. With 65, he had shared the first-round lead with Bob Duden, Duden, from Oswego, Ore., took a 71 for 136.

High scorer for the winners was Jake Jacobson with 21 points while Al Spagel led the losers with 12 points.

Second game of the Lower Island title round will be played Friday at Brentwood, starting at 9.30 p.m.

NAVY TRIPPED

College Cage Stock Improves

By IAN SMITH

Victoria College's varying basketball fortunes took a slight turn for the better at Central Junior High School Friday.

At least one of the Viking teams, the junior men's edition, appears to be on its way and the seniors also provided indication that they still possess a smattering of talent.

Junior Vikings inherited the favorite's role in the three-team city junior playoffs after a 57-27 conquest of Navy. They now have only to get by Royal Roads on Monday to earn the right to play Cheaminus in a two-game, total-point series for the lower Vancouver Island championship.

STIRRING RALLY

In the second game, senior "A" Vikings, responding to a meagre crowd that suddenly became extremely vociferous late in the second half, rallied from a 12-point deficit but could not beat the determined Vancouver Jayvees, finally bowing 57-53.

Vikings fell into their characteristic scoring drought (it lasted approximately 10 minutes) when the fans began to offer their moral support.

The result was a flurry of Viking baskets that brought them to within one point of the Jayvees with three minutes remaining, indicating that the Vikings are still an effective team when the organization and desire is there.

George Bette topped the Junior Vikings with 13 points, while Don Farquhar tossed in 12 points in a hurry late in the game. Trevor Gibson scored 11 points for the College.

In the senior game, Ken McCulloch led the Vikings with 15 points while Bob Tomlinson and Walde Skillings each fired 14.

In the opening game of the tripleheader, Victoria B's trounced the College girls' team 50-28.

Vic High Runners Dominate Picture

Victoria High School's domination of the local cross-country running picture seems in little danger of being seriously challenged. Friday, with Tommy Burgess setting the pace in a three-team, three and one-half mile run at Vic High, the Gordon Hartley-coached students allowed only one non-Vic runner to finish among the first 10 finishers.

Chris Longridge of Shawnigan Lake Boys' School, was the lone "outsider" to make the top 10, placing seventh.

John Valiant, Brian MacDonald, Winston Jackson, Jim Robertson and Palle Jensen followed Burgess across the line. Burgess' time was 17 minutes 39 seconds while Valiant was clocked in 18:05.

Behind Longridge, in eighth place was Vic-High's Alf Lincoln followed by teammates Eric Carlsen and Rod Fuller.

SALT SPRING UNGUARDED

Fire Brigade Petition Made

GANGES—A petition is being circulated on Salt Spring Island asking for formation of a fire protection district, members of Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce were told at their annual meeting here this week.

There are 850 resident property owners and 340 owners who live off the island. The petition must have 70 per cent support to be adopted.

When the survey is completed, results will go to the water controller in Victoria, who will assess the vote of the various areas, then call a public meeting for election of a board of trustees.

The petition and drive for establishment of a fire-protection district has been carried on by a joint committee representing the chamber and the volunteer fire brigade here.

The plan already has been given enthusiastic support at public meetings held on the island to explain the program. Aim of the group is to have a fire truck carrying a 500-gallon tank, and a fire hall adequate for housing the truck and equipment, and training firemen.

Cost would be up to $24,000, which would be borrowed from the government and repaid over a 10-year period, and charge to the ratepayer would be about two mills.

Since insurance rates were due to rise this month in unprotected areas of B.C., it was estimated that the increase would be cut in half by formation of the district, thus offsetting to a great extent the tax increase.

Young Girl Dies After Toothache

(From CP Dispatches)

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. — A 12-year-old girl who suffered a rare infection which started as a toothache and spread to her brain died early Friday despite efforts of RCMP officers who rushed a respirator 350 miles through the night from Kamloops.

Mildred Munro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Munro, complained of toothache early this week and went to the dentist. The tooth was extracted but the pain and swelling continued and she was taken to hospital where her condition deteriorated Wednesday. She finally went into a coma.

Doctors diagnosed a rare infection which they said was carried by a vein to the brain.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

VANCOUVER — Edward Beaver, 22, and Ronald Fortaine, 38, Friday were committed for trial on a charge of murder in connection with the Nov. 15 death of Neil McFarlane, 60, in a downtown rooming house fire.

The Crown said the blaze started after gasoline had been thrown from the street into the stairway of the Beaver Lodge Rooms.

Magistrate Oscar Orr said that although the evidence produced was "unsatisfactory," the men would have to be committed for trial.

During Friday's hearing, Beaver's mother, Mrs. Barbara Hines, was escorted out of police court after she shouted out from the spectators' section. She said a Crown witness was lying.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER

NORTH VANCOUVER — A murder charge against a 40-year-old businessman, accused of murdering his female employer, was dismissed Friday for lack of evidence.

Magistrate A. D. Pool ruled after the preliminary hearing in county court that there "is certainly no direct evidence" against James Arthur Mason. Mason was accused in the death of Mrs. Josephine Herrett, 40, a widow who took over as president of the Pemberton Roofing Company when her husband was killed two years ago in an auto accident. Mason was manager of the firm.

Mrs. Herrett was found dead early Boxing Day in an apartment she and her 17-year-old daughter shared above the company offices.

Crown prosecutor J. M. Lakes had asked that Mason be committed for trial on the "keystone" evidence of the daughter, Dianne. She testified earlier that Mason struck her mother in the sequel to a drinking party at the roofing plant Christmas Eve.

TOT STRANGLED

DAWSON CREEK — Mrs. Tiny Ingwersen found her three-year-old son strangled on the pickets of a verandah railing Thursday. Police said the child apparently slipped and was caught by the neck between the pickets.

STREET BLASTERS PLAY TRICKY TRIGGER GAME WITH PEDESTRIANS

A Dynamiter's Got To Be Delicate—Or Up We All Go

By JOHN MIKA
Blowing-up city streets is a fine art.
Without skill and caution, there would be a daily casualty list of sidewalk superintendents who watch the rapid excavation program on downtown streets in this year's phase of the B.C. Electric underground wiring project.
Before the wires come down off the poles in 1961, a good part of the rock under the roads has to come up—with a bang.
"The public is our main worry," said 31-year-old Emile Kalyn in an interview.
A foreman and dynamiter with A. J. Barr Ltd., he's seen a lot of rock smashed in two previous years on the underground wiring job.
This year's "powder man" is Harry Hill, 2642 Shelbourne, on loan from another contractor.
Recalling some anxious moments at the plunger which triggers a detonation, Mr. Kalyn said:
"Some of the pedestrians just give you a dirty look when they are warned that a charge is about to be set off. Some of them will even walk right through the danger zone."
"You have to be ready to stop in a split-second. It slows the job quite a bit and sure causes some worries at times." But the reckless behavior of pedestrians is a tribute in reverse to the skill of the "powder men" who crush tons of hard rock without injuring persons in the downtown throngs only a few feet away.

... powder man

What's the secret?
"Well, the main thing in blasting is placing the charge. Street blasting is tricky because you have water lines, sewer lines and gas lines often running close to your charge.

"Too much powder or the wrong angle in drilling holes for the dynamite, and you can cause a lot of damage. It takes a long time to learn where and how you should place your charge.
"In fact, it is an art. You never know too much about it and no matter how long you're at it, you can still learn," Mr. Kalyn said.
Depending on how the holes are drilled and spaced in a rock determines whether a three-foot "face" of rock will break up in such a way that its surface is undisturbed or whether it—and an adjacent sewer pipe—are blasted sky high.

"You also have to gauge just how much powder you will use. Too little won't do the job and too much can cause a lot of damage—especially to the plate-glass windows all around you.
"If it's not done just right, most of the blast will be straight up and out throwing a lot of rock around."
For difficult shots, a mat of woven truck tires can be used to smother a charge in a deep cut, preventing the geysers of rocks. For shallow cuts, a mat of chained logs is used.

The type of charge is important, too.
"I prefer to work with 40 per cent Forcite, for a job like this although there are men who prefer 60 per cent. The lower charge gives you more heaving power to break up rock from underneath because its action is slower," Mr. Kalyn said.
Biggest explosion he has triggered while working on the BCE project occurred last year when he set off 250 sticks of dynamite in one shot.
"That's a fairly powerful charge to let go on a street job but it went off all right," Mr. Kalyn, who has worked with Barr Construction for eight years and obtained his dynamiter's certificate six years ago, mentioned another aspect of a powder man's life.

"I still get nervous once in a while. You just can't help it because there are so many things that could happen.
"I've had some scares but I've only been hurt once and it wasn't from dynamite. A big stone rolled down on a construction job and cracked the bone in my leg.
"I suppose you've got to have some luck when you're handling dynamite but you have to do your work as though there wasn't any luck to help you."

EMILE KALYN ... it's a great art.

Civic Staff Wage Rebuff 'Ridiculous'

City council's decision Friday not to offer pay increases to employees was termed "ridiculous," "amazing" and "disappointing" by City Hall union spokesmen today.

At least one union will seek "immediate" appointment of a conciliation officer.
The unions asked for boosts averaging between 15 and 16 per cent, but Mayor Scurrah said council felt any increases were unjustified.

"I am amazed by this decision," Tom Smith, spokesman for inside staff, said today.
"A recent management-employee survey showed City Hall staffs earned 15.78 per cent less than private workers in comparable jobs. If the city expects us to continue working at a loss, they are mistaken."

CONCILIATION BID
Mr. Smith said he was "disappointed" that the city was not prepared to negotiate further and said his union would apply at once for conciliation proceedings to be set up.

He said the outside staff as well as firemen and police unions gave up their right to strike in 1958 in favor of accepting binding arbitration of pay disputes.

Firemen's president Eric Simmons declined comment on the grounds that he would "prefer to leave this to the negotiation table."
"If Mayor Scurrah wants to publish his reasons for turning us down, that's up to him," he said.

COST $457,297
A police spokesman said council's attitude was ridiculous, adding, "This matter is not ended. I can tell you—not by a long way."
Mayor Scurrah said granting the unions' request for more pay would cost the city an additional $457,297, and result in a total of 32.7 mills for general purposes. Current mill rate is 26.63 mills.

"In view of the fact there is going to be increased taxation and an increase in school tax, and because of the character of reasons given for more wages, council does not feel it can make any offer whatever," the mayor added.

First Dip Here In Unemployed

'HEAR MY ANSWER'

MLA Invites Scurrah To Meeting

Former alderman Donald A. Smith, MLA, said today he would be "happy" to answer Mayor Percy Scurrah's charge of "impertinence" Monday at the 8 p.m. ratepayers meeting in the lower Crystal Garden.

The mayor made the statement about Mr. Smith's stand that ratepayers had made a wrong decision on the downtown improvement and parking plan.

"I hope the mayor will be there," said Mr. Smith, "as there will be some interesting answers for the public."
Mayor Scurrah had previously turned down a challenge to discuss the issue on a public platform.

1,600 SIGN TO SAVE CITY MARKET

More than 1,600 persons have signed a petition requesting the city to preserve the Flanagan Street public market which is facing demolition to make way for a parking lot.

A delegation of growers will submit the petition to the city Wednesday.

Attilo Randy, 72, veteran stallholder in the 44-year-old institution, said growers met with no difficulty in obtaining signatures for the petition.

"We didn't have to ask them to sign," he said. "They came to us and asked that the names be placed on the petition."

Formerly of Edmonton, he set up a practice here, but was forced to retire a few years ago because of ill health. His wife, Ellen Jean, died a year ago.

He was a past master of St. Andrew's Lodge No. 49, A.F. & A.M., and of the Saltier's Society of Victoria. Until recently he lived at 2799 Sea View Drive, and at the time of his death lived at 4000 Lockers Road.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. I wish to make a complaint against a firm whose head office is in Vancouver. If I were in that city I would go to the Better Business Bureau. Is there a similar organization in Victoria where I can obtain advice and assistance?
G.A.

A. Complaints of this nature are handled here through the Chamber of Commerce, which operates a service much along the same lines as the BBB, but in a more limited manner. Actually, there is no reason why you couldn't write the BBB in Vancouver, telling them your complaint.

Answering a question submitted by a reader, the Times' editorial board has decided to publish questions and answers in the Times. All questions should be sent with full names and addresses. The Times does not undertake to solve legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to dealers.

MONTY'S DOUBLE — M.E. Clifton James, who was Field Marshal Montgomery's real-life double during the Second World War, is due to arrive in Victoria Tuesday for a six-hour stopover. Mr. James will tour Canada, making speeches in several major centres. He will address the British Overseas League in Vancouver Tuesday night. While here he will be a guest at the Empress Hotel.

Labor 'Fall-In' Set For March on MLAs

Some 350 labor leaders and unemployed throughout the province are scheduled to meet in the Crystal Garden Monday.

The 9 a.m. meeting to be guided by William Black, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, will discuss unemployment (including unemployed persons' debts), workmen's compensation, labor legislation and the use of the Civil Defence Act in a labor dispute.

The gathering will then split into groups and converge on the Legislative Buildings to lobby government members on topics to be detailed at the meeting.

Federation spokesmen were cagey today about revealing details of the actual lobby agenda, but unemployment will be high on the list.

Meanwhile, Don Bushell, secretary of the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council, today urged as many unemployed persons as possible to join the Crystal Garden meeting.

"Since Victoria is the capital city, we should have as big a turnout of unemployed as possible," he said.

"Unemployment is labor problem number one in the province and we need all support we can get for this lobby."

Department of Fisheries vessel Howay declared during a routine report that it was engaged in a search for a fish-erries man missing on a hunting trip to Porcher Island, in the Prince Rupert area.

Four vessels, 22 men, one helicopter and a light plane took part in the search. The man was found later the same day in good condition.

The first reduction since October in the number of registered unemployed was recorded this week in Victoria, the local National Employment Service announced today.

There are now 5,812 unemployed applicants on file compared to 5,846 a week ago. Current total is composed of 3,984 men and 1,828 women.

The job improvement is laid to the end of seasonal layoffs in the retail trade and re-hirings for January sales, together with resumption of activity in the construction, lumbering and logging industries.

WINTER WORK PERKS
Meanwhile, the NES winter work campaign is reported doing well, evidenced by considerable renovation, remodeling and redecorating work being carried out in the city.

One city contractor reports his jobbing work has increased by 48 per cent over last winter.

Also, the municipal winter work plan on a labor cost-sharing basis with the federal government is now under way in Victoria, with some 75 men already put to work on eight projects started out of 29 approved so far.

OFF THE MAPS

Mr. McPhillips' letter was interpreted by at least one opponent to the carrier change to mean that he supported PWA's application.

George Warren, commissioner of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau, said, "I can't understand his attitude."

"If PWA takes over, Victoria will come off the maps and flight routes of all major, important airlines. We will be looked upon as one end of an insignificant feeder operation."

Mr. Warren made the first TCA transcontinental flight into Victoria.

He denied Mr. McPhillips' claim that TCA will not continue its three-point service.

Mr. Warren produced a letter written by TCA president McGreggor to Ray Rawnsley, president Victoria Jaycees.

"There's nothing in it to even suggest that TCA plans to abandon the service," said Mr. Warren.

Mr. McGreggor, in his letter, clarified the company's position.

TCA Definitely Quitting Says MP

Civic and business groups opposing Pacific Western Airlines' application to take over Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle service don't seem to realize that the present carrier, Trans-Canada Air Lines "will not continue the run," Victoria MP A. deB. McPhillips said today.

His statement was made in a letter to Mayor Percy Scurrah. Together with the Chamber of Commerce, Junior Chamber and Island bulb growers, the mayor wired Mr. McPhillips, Transport Minister Hees, Defence Minister Pearson and TCA president Gordon McGreggor when PWA announced it had applied to the Air Transport Board for a licence to operate the triangle service.

Mayor Scurrah questioned PWA's ability to maintain the same service as TCA, particularly in emergency periods such as the prolonged ferry strike last summer.

TCA carried 344,898 passengers last year, 300,178 in 1957. The company claimed it lost $1,300,000 on the run in 1957.

On TCA's alleged losses, Mr. McGreggor said that on the basis of "fully allocated costs" every route bore its proper proportion of the company's general expense. West Coast services showed, in 1957, losses in excess of $1,000,000.

"This does not mean that, had the company not been operating those routes in 1957 it would have been financially better off to the same extent. The discontinuance of West Coast services would relieve it of its direct operating costs on those routes but the indirect costs would be little affected by such a move."

"In 1957 TCA's revenues did not meet the direct operating costs on the West Coast services but on the basis of accounting, the deficit was a minor fraction of that indicated on the fully allocated cost basis."

Department of Fisheries vessel Howay declared during a routine report that it was engaged in a search for a fish-erries man missing on a hunting trip to Porcher Island, in the Prince Rupert area.

Four vessels, 22 men, one helicopter and a light plane took part in the search. The man was found later the same day in good condition.

The second occurred a few days later when the rescue sub-coordinator at Kitimat reported a search was being carried out for the cabin cruiser Cougar, missing with four men aboard.

After searching for two days the men were found near Gertrude Point in Douglas Channel. All were in good condition and reported their anchor cable had fallen overboard and fouled the propeller.

Of the five small craft and two barges salvaged through the efforts of the search and rescue agencies, the most valuable was a barge and its load of newsprint valued at about $600,000.

The tug LaVerne reported losing the barge near Pine Island in Queen Charlotte Straits during a gale.

The Rescue Centre radioed the tug Island Commander to assist in salvage operations.

A line was attached to the drifting barge nearly two days later. By this time it had been blown nearly 100 miles north. It was then towed to Finlay Channel to wait until weather improved, before continuing its journey.

AFTER 25 YEARS, A WINNER?

George Snags a Sponsor
For Free Publicity in U.S.
Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau said George Warren has apparently won a 23-year fight to have Vancouver Island tourist literature enter the United States duty free.

Mr. Warren disclosed today a letter from Senator Don C. Magnuson of Washington State indicating that he has reintroduced a bill to the U.S. Congress calling for the lifting of duty on Island tourist literature into the U.S.

If it is approved by the Congress and finally by the Senate it will mark the end of Mr. Warren's fight for a reciprocal agreement.

IN STEP WITH STYLE

Well-Dressed Man Gets Assist From Wife

A woman's best accessory is a well dressed man. And all recent surveys indicate that milady is not leaving this fact to chance.

Armed with a swatch of the suiting the lady of the house may often be found carefully co-ordinating ties and socks for the man in her life.

No longer does the average male feel the necessity to be independent of help when entering the field of fabric and color. Keeping up with the latest in new designs, new materials and suitable colors is after all, natural instinct for a woman. Rarely does she invest the family income, tinker with the engine in the car or split wood for the fireplace. But—let's face it—she reads the fashion news.

At the fashion showings this January in New York, the Couture Group of the New York Dress Institute, through Victor and Francesca Lebow (who believes the interest shown by women in clothes worn by their husbands should be encouraged), staged a delightful men's fashion show, for the first time in many years by presenting new styles to the press.

Victor Lebow commented the show and entitled it "The Lady Says Yes."

Accent in this spring and summer collection was coolness and comfort... with men's suits as light in weight as those worn by women.

"Espresso Brown" held the spotlight colorwise. Those of you who have enjoyed Espresso coffee will know this rich, dark shade.

In the sportswear group color ran riot—blacks with yellow jacket, pale blue trousers with a blue and brown printed English wool challis jacket.

Jackets conform to the natural shoulder line and fall easily and comfortably to a new slightly shorter length. Trousers also are cut a shade shorter.

A glimpse of things to come was a suit with the "Hermes cuff." The trousers are cuffless but the jacket sleeves have small neat cuffs.

The last cuffless trouser era was necessitated by a shortage of fabric during the war. This time if you join the cuffless brigade it will be because you are style conscious.

Memo to Men—"Compliment the woman in your life by dressing well... the well dressed woman deserves a well dressed man."

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

The neck and chinline are often the giveaway to a woman's age. She may appear quite youthful in the face but have a neck which appears years older.

This situation is not always entirely avoidable but much can be done to delay and minimize it. For instance, many women do not give their necks the same care they lavish on their faces. The neck requires the same beauty routine with cleansing, stimulation and lubrication.

Then, too, posture plays a big part in the youthfulness of the neck. If you habitually tuck your chin into your neck, or walk or sit with your chin leading the way by a number of inches, your neck will not be the thing of beauty it might be.

It is true that we use the muscles of the neck and face continually; but, even so, great improvement can be wrought by the faithful use of facial or neck exercises. As I have said before in this column there are two schools of thought about exercises for the neck.

One believes in stretching the muscles underneath the chin and the other thinks that these muscles should not be stretched at all. I belong to the former school of thought. I have seen too many older women with lovely throats who have indulged in stretching exercises, not to be sold on the idea.

I do not mean that we should do only exercises which stretch, but these should be a part of any routine. The muscles under the chin have a tendency to shorten as the years pass.

The following are two simple exercises which one woman I know did for years with lovely results.

1. Stand or sit with the back straight. Lower the head backward until you feel the pull on the muscles under the chin. Hold while you count to five. Lift head. Continue, slowly.

2. Lie across the bed on your back with your head hanging off the edge of the bed. Lift the head and touch the chin to the chest. Lower head backward. Continue, slowly.

If you would like to have my exercises for the neck, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for the leaflet "Is Your Chinline a Pain in the Neck?" No. 10. Address: Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

and the club name in letters of black and gold.

New member to be initiated in a candlelight ceremony is Mrs. A. C. Dimock.

Vancouver chapter members in the city for the gathering are: Mrs. G. C. Magee, Mrs. E. McBain, Mrs. J. N. Bodell, Mrs. N. Taylor, Mrs. D. A. Bell, Mrs. E. C. Drake, Mrs. N. Rees, Mrs. W. D. Flower, Mrs. G. J. Cooke, Mrs. P. L. Dill, Mrs. O. Webber and Mrs. W. R. Dallam.

On Sunday members and visitors will be entertained at luncheon in the home of Mrs. R. C. Newby, Camrose Crescent. Mrs. R. A. Gale is convener.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

In the seventeenth century it was not unusual to see a "bread and cake eating lady" at English fairs. One such performer ate 12 pounds of cake and bread in half an hour, at each of six daily appearances. No doubt a girdle was dispensed with.

Homemade cookies and cakes need to be stored in a jar or tin that is scrupulously clean. Wash with a solution of three tablespoons baking soda in a quart of water, rinse and dry. It's also a good idea to line tins with wax paper, or foil so crumbs can't settle in the cracks.

Hungarian peasant loaves of bread weigh more than 12 pounds each, making them among the largest loaves in the world. It's interesting to speculate for just how many breakfasts they would last!

DEAR ABBY...

A Good Wife Is Hard to Find!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A girl who cashiers for my husband came to me and told me that all the gossip that was going around about her and my husband WAS true. I almost died because I hadn't heard any gossip. She said they were in love. I spoke to my husband and he says he LIKES her but doesn't LOVE her. When I see her driving my husband's car around town it is like someone puts a knife through my heart. This whole thing is making me a nervous wreck.

My husband says to overlook it because a good cashier is hard to find. What should I do?

HEARTSICK

DEAR HEARTSICK: A good wife is harder to find than a good cashier. Insist that your husband get rid of her. If he gives you an argument, ring up "NO SALE!" There is more than "cash" registering in this deal.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man who takes you out and eyes every girl he sees? That's my friend. When we are in a restaurant he looks every girl up and down and down and up and I say to him, "Hon, what are you looking for?" And he says to me, "Hon, what are YOU looking for? An ARGUMENT?" Is there anything I can do about it?

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: If a man can't keep his eyes on the girl he's with—the girl would be wise to do a little "looking" herself. For another friend.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has had athlete's foot since Second World War and it has almost worried me crazy. No matter how much I scrub the tub I am afraid to take a bath after him. Don't tell him to see a doctor because he already has and nothing he gave him has killed it. My neighbor said sun lamp treatments would cure it. A friend of mine suggested maybe it was a vitamin deficiency. I wish you would tell me what I should do.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: I am no doctor, but I know that the only place you will find a cure is in a dermatologist's office. If (after 12 years) your husband's athlete's foot is still there, your husband may never give you another one.

DEAR ABBY: I am ashamed but I need help. I have lived with a man for 27 years and had two daughters by him. One is 26 and the other 24 and they are both married. Now he left me and I am 62 years old and can't get work because of my age. I have no income, except what my children give me. Everyone thinks we are married and I don't want to be married because of the scandal. He owns property, has money in the bank and is a respected citizen.

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: Call a lawyer. If this man is a property owner and has any self-respect he doesn't want a scandal, either. When a lawyer spells out what his responsibilities are toward you, he will listen carefully and act accordingly.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BEAU THE BEATNIK: The opinion you EXPRESSED Should have gone by slow freight.

For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this paper. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

LOUISE DAVIS

OFFENCE CAUSES EMBARRASSMENT:

At the request of the parents of our son's fiancée, we furnished them with a list of our relatives and friends for the wedding invitations. I have discovered that they are not inviting two brothers, who are my son's close friends and whose wives have offended the bride in some way. Is this correct? The boys' widowed mother, who is a close friend of mine, is being invited.

I shall ask that my list be returned if they are going to be this choosy.

Louise Davis Answers: I hope that you won't be so vindictive as to ask that your list be returned. Omitting your friends would only bring the situation out in the open and you would be making many people "unhappy." You would regret the move and regret more two wrongs don't make a right.

Neither you nor I have the right to pass judgment on the offense of the two wives against the bride. Perhaps your son's fiancée and her parents will still be magnanimous by inviting the two couples, but if they don't that is their prerogative and it would be ill-mannered of you to force the issue.

They may feel that it would be hypocrisy to "request the pleasure of your company" to the wedding and reception. And, in turn, the wives might not accept the invitation when they are aware of the hostility.

Keep Live Pets Away From Children Under Six Years

TORONTO (CP)—No child under six years of age should have a pet dog or cat, says Mrs. Harry Saunders, chairman of the women's division of the Toronto Humane Society.

"Pets should be barred for children until they are old enough to take proper care of them," she said. "Small children will just grab kittens or puppies and injure them, because youngsters do not understand how fragile the animals are."

Mrs. Saunders, chief of the women's division since 1952 and a member of the Humane Society for more than 20 years, said that even when pets are

Marriage Vows Heard

First Baptist Church was setting recently for the marriage of Hazel Louisa Sweeting and Alan Vere Archibald. Rev. G. R. Easter officiated and H. Bergink was organist.

Bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Sweeting, 1666 Ross St., Victoria. The groom's parents, originally from Victoria, are Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Archibald, now living in Vancouver.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full-length gown of white lace. Tiers of lace and tulle formed side panels down the skirt.

A sequined headress held her bridal veil and she carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations and tiny red roses. Her jewelry was aquamarine earrings, gift of the groom.

Maid of honor, Miss Toni Frumento, chose a gown of pale pink lace with tiered skirt. Bridesmaids, Miss Wendy Burbridge and Miss Sharon Armstrong, chose pale green and pale blue lace. All attendants carried colonial bouquets of carnations.

Best man was Gordon West-Johnson. Ross McKay and John Markin ushered.

At a reception in Dulcie's Hall, Dave Barnfield proposed the toast to his niece.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. M. Leek and Mr. and Mrs. L. Joyce of Seattle, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Shearer of Vancouver.

Leaving for a Vancouver and Seattle honeymoon, the bride chose a cherry red wool suit with winter white accessories.

Hour Glass Figure Back

PARIS (Reuters)—The "hour-glass" figure returned to the fashion world this week in a new collection shown by designer Jean Patou at opening of Paris shows.

The Patou girl has a tiny, nipped waistline, rounded hips and full, accentuated bosom. Her skirt, easier and wider than the old tube shape, comes comfortably below the knee.

"Doublet" jackets mould the midriff and define the natural waist. The hips are marked with rolled pleats jutting out at right angles.

Dresses recall the feminine simplicity of the Gibson girl, as Patou revives wasp waists and corsets, accentuated by wide belts.

MIDDLE EAST EXPERT

Elizabeth MacCallum, now with the external affairs department's historical section, for years was the government's sole authority on the Middle East.

Expert on Middle East Advocates Diplomacy

OTTAWA (CP)—If you favor the long view in international affairs, try talking to Elizabeth MacCallum.

A world authority on the Middle East, she sees today's headlines in history's chastening perspective.

From 1942 to 1947, this remarkable Canadian was the government's sole expert on the Middle East. Here is her advice:

Parish Party

Woodland arrangements of pastel-tinted twigs, grasses and rock moss centred tables at the annual coffee party of Sacred Heart Parish held in the Hudson's Bay Douglas Room.

Mrs. R. Weicker was convener.

Receiving guests was Mrs. G. Van der Haegen with Mrs. E. W. Adrian and Mrs. M. Connor taking tickets. Decorations were arranged by Mrs. K. Kissinger.

Assisting with the party were Mrs. J. Burrow, Mrs. D. Brooks, Mrs. K. W. Campbell, Mrs. A. Conner, Mrs. N. Dougall, Mrs. J. Howroyd, Mrs. P. Jeannotte, Mrs. D. Lotzer, Mrs. J. D. Magee, Mrs. G. Rice and Mrs. L. Webb. A sum of $90 was realized.

Conference — At a board meeting held recently in Duncan, Mrs. J. H. McArthur president of Victoria Presbytery Women's Association urged all members to attend a WA conference arranged in Nanaimo on March 11 and 12. Plans were made for the annual meeting of the group to be held in Chemainus on Feb. 25.

A happy gathering Friday evening prior to the Victoria Symphony's 10th annual ball was this group who were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Nickells at a cocktail party in the Nickells home on Cochrane Avenue. Among guests are, from left, Mrs. Nickells, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Gruber, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Rulledge, Dr. John H. Lewis, Miss Adele Goult, and Cmdr. F. R. Grubb and Mrs. Grubb.

Flower-Like Gowns Highlight Symphony Ball

Beautiful gowns bloomed like night flowers at the Victoria Symphony annual ball in the Crystal Ballroom of the Empress Hotel, Friday evening.

Large floral prints, rich silk brocades and graceful bouffant fabrics were noted. Heavy textured cream silk with a tiny gold line running through the material, formed the gown worn by Mrs. Harry Gladwell. Full blown brown roses decorated the full length bell skirt and the strapless bodice was trimmed with brown velvet.

Mrs. Ian Butters chose a gold and cream silk brocade gown in graceful full length. A deep peacock blue Indian sari with gold embroidery fashioned along simple lines was the floor length gown of Mrs. E. E. Pearlman.

Mrs. W. P. McColl chose a bouffant gown of yards of white chiffon print with blue roses, posed over blue taffeta, with a simple draped bodice.

A highlight of the evening was a demonstration of ballroom dance. Dr. and Mrs. Ronald A. Holtum performed the dances.

Supper at midnight was served in the Empress Room and the hotel lounge. Len Acres and his orchestra played for dancing.

Flowers Fill Church For Afternoon Vows

Baskets of iris and pink and white carnations, daffodils and pew markers of garlands of heather made a lovely setting for the wedding this afternoon of Miss Leslie Kathleen Field and Harry McGregor Sjoberg.

Bride is the daughter of Mrs. Madeline Field, St. Charles Street, and the late F. J. Field. Groom is the son of Mrs. R. Campbell, Victoria, and J. A. Sjoberg, Metochosin.

Vows were heard in St. Luke's Anglican Church, by Rev. T. D. B. Ragg.

Eric Edwards played the organ and Mrs. J. Griffiths sang "O Perfect Love."

Stanley S. Wadge gave his niece in marriage.

Lace over taffeta formed the bouffant ballerina length bridal gown. The bodice with lily point sleeves and a scalloped oval neckline was sashed with a pleated taffeta cummerbund, floating into panels at the back. A coronet held her chapel length veil. The bride's 21st birthday present from her parents, a rhinestone necklace, was worn as jewellery. Five gardenias encircled with soft pink carnations and freesia formed the bridal bouquet.

Talisman rose nylon chiffon with deep velvet cummerbund on tone, fashioned the ballerina length gown worn by Miss Lois Field, maid of honor. Her bouquet was roses and carnations. Mrs. S. Stout, sister of the groom, was bridesmatron in yellow chiffon. She carried a bouquet of yellow carnations and irises.

Mrs. Field, bride's mother, chose a model suit in navy with a soft green hat and a green orchid corsage. The groom's mother wore a teal blue two-piece dress with a white carnation corsage.

Stewart Stout was best man and Ken Guhrer and Beach Richards were ushers.

At a reception at Holyrood House, Sidney Chiverrall proposed the toast to the bride.

A turquoise cashmere suit with grey Persian lamb collar, a cloche velour hat on tone and a corsage of white carnations formed the bride's traveling ensemble.

Newlyweds will make their home at 1618 Hawthorne Street, Gordon Head on their return.

Naval Housing Unit Project Helps Combat Unemployment

This is big business. In Belmont Park, where navy wives and children live—two whopping new units are being erected, totalling more than $855,000.

At the peak of construction, approximately 60 men are working on the two federal projects, one encompassing 43 living units and the other with 37 units. Costs to the government will be about $467,000 and $392,000 respectively.

This is one of the indications of what is being done locally in the "Do It Now" program of government, industry, and individuals trying to eliminate winter unemployment.

The units are about three-quarters of a mile apart; the larger near the fire hall and the other near the R.C. church.

Builders are Farmer Construction Ltd., through National Housing and Mortgage.

In addition, the company is erecting in the same area a six-room addition to Belmont Elementary School, to cost about $250,000.

QUIZZING the GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL
Q—What causes the tips of aspidistra leaves to turn brown, and why do the leaves split? (No name).

A—Contrary to general belief, aspidistras appreciate a little attention at this time of the year. Your plant may have become starved from being in a poor soil, and requires repotting into fresh well-drained soil with a little bonemeal added. Do not overpot, or overwater until plant is re-established.

Q—Is it safe to divide shrubs the same as we do perennials when they grow too big? K.M., Cordova Bay.

A—Too bad you did not specify your shrubs by name in your question. Some shrubs such as grafted rhododendrons, lilacs and roses cannot, of course, be divided. Those which produce clumps of growth may be split apart in early spring (any time from now until April). Such shrubs as the spiraea, coralberry (symphoricarpos), bush honeysuckles and mock-oranges (philadelphus) may be divided and the pieces replanted.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Check Lawn Mower Soon; Be Prepared to Spray

By JACK BEASTALL

Today is the last day of January. Four weeks from today will be the last day of February, and March will be waiting at the garden gate murmuring something about it being later than we think, or sounds to that effect.

These facts were discovered while gazing at the calendar. Any gardener who has a calendar can figure along the same lines.

March can mean the first cutting of the lawn. In turn, that can mean the spoiling of an otherwise perfect week-end if the job is attempted with a last-year's lawn-mower.

To do a good job of the first cutting in spring, when the soil tends to be soft and the grass shoots are young and tender, it is important that the mower be in first class condition.

The revolving blades should cut a cigarette paper at any point of contact along the stationary blade, cut clean that is, and not tear the paper.

MAKES EASY WORK

It is easy to push a machine with sharp and properly set blades. The sharp blades cut the young grass without tearing the plants from the soil, and the wheels run over the soft soil instead of digging-in or skidding over the surface.

Very few lawn-mowers of the hand type are in such perfect condition at the beginning of the season, although it takes but a few days to have them serviced at this time of year.

If you have a lawn that you value, don't be ashamed to be seen cutting it with a hand-mower. These so-called antiques, when properly serviced, are kinder to the grass and safer for the operator than the cheaper types of power-mowers.

The servicing of a power-mower takes longer than a hand-mower. There are many parts to be checked and adjusted on the engine, although the sharpening of the blade is not such a delicate operation.

EARLY DATE

Power mowers go to mechanics for servicing, and most of these mechanics also have to work on stationary engines and outboard motors, and while most gardeners are without outboard motors, there are a lot of non-gardeners who use them.

Outboards are rapidly outnumbering power lawn mowers, and since the gardener and speed-boat owner will both want their motors ready at the same time, it might be a good idea to make arrangements for servicing immediately.

Before we need to use the lawn-mower we shall be using the spraying and pruning equipment on our fruit trees. Pruning can be tackled in any mild spell during February but for spraying we have to choose the day. We need a temperature around 40 degrees F., only the lightest of air movement, and no rain for the next eight to twelve hours.

Days when conditions are all perfect are not easy to find, and therefore the equipment must be ready for operation at a moment's notice.

Tomorrow would be a good day to try out the sprayer. The jet may need cleaning, some parts may have corroded, or the pressure seal may be leaking. Needed repair parts can be picked up next week, together with the spray materials.

The pruning saw, the long tree pruners, and the secateurs, should also be checked and sharpened. Dull tools do more harm to a tree than the amount of good derived from the pruning.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

If potted hyacinths and daffodils are to be planted out after flowering, give feeding of complete fertilizer, and continue watering until foliage yellows.

Commence taking of cuttings from chrysanthemum plants stored in cold frames. Root in boxes of sandy soil in window or cool greenhouse.

Repotting of ferns, aspidistras and palms should be done now just before new growth commences.

Prepare all garden tools for use.

Build cold frames, paths and fences, before spring work begins in earnest.

Wood ashes which have been kept dry, or fresh ashes from outdoor fire will benefit young fruit trees.

Continue pruning of fruit trees on suitable days.

Spraying of fruit trees should be done on windless days.

Killing insects by dehydrating them looks promising as a pest control measure. Silica dusts have been developed which absorb the wax or oil layer on insects' bodies, making it impossible for them to retain moisture.

Home canning can easily be fitted into a busy homemaking schedule by putting up just several jars at a time throughout the growing season as vegetables mature.

At summer's end, you'll be surprised at the quantity of appetizing, nutritious vegetables you've been able to prepare to help slash high out-of-season food bills.

Home canning accessories now on the market make it quick and easy to can garden vegetables.

Moreover, you'll enjoy a special satisfaction from serving the vegetables you've raised from seed all by yourself.

FIX-IT-FORUM

Q—We live in an older house, and every word said downstairs can be heard through radiators upstairs. This is very annoying. What can we do to drown out racket?—B.J.

A—Lining interior of ducts with asbestos felt may do the trick.

Q—What is the best angle at which to saw?—J.L.

A—Keep saw at a cutting angle of about 60 degrees between the edge of the saw and the face of the work for rip-sawing; a 45-degree angle is about right for crosscutting.

Joan's grades were slipping...

...yet she couldn't seem to study. What she needed was a room of her own—which we couldn't afford to build.

1—Our empty, unfinished attic provided the answer. "We'll put a window in here," said Jim, "and panel the room with PV Hardboards."

2—On the walls and sloping ceiling, Jim nailed random-planked Colonial Board. Panel joints don't show; finished the job with one coat of paint," he boasted. "It's prime-coated!"

3—On the flat ceiling he used Pre-finished Square-tex. The painting of all a pin-up panel of perforated Aero Board completed the transformation.

Now Joan has a quiet, attractive room any teen-ager would be proud of; thanks to low-cost, labour-saving PV Hardboards. For full details of these tough, all-wood panels, see your lumber dealer today. Ask him about low-interest Home Improvement Loans.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By MICHAEL ROSE

Question: What kind of distinctive Victoria, gift do you think the city should give Queen Elizabeth when she visits here in July?

Donald Elliott, 305 Linden: "I don't know quite what to give her. I would like to show her we appreciate her coming and out of respect but we shouldn't spend too much money on it."

Albert Ferriday, 1416 Fort: "She got Indian craft for the most part when she was here as a Princess, and we should give her something different. It would have to be something made here and that makes it difficult. Perhaps one of those big Indian blankets would be the best."

Mrs. Catherine Elliott, 305 Linden: "Perhaps something that she could wear or carry would be nice. She has everything she needs now so it would have to be something typical of Victoria and novel at the same time."

Margaret Russell, 1904 Fort: "She's got a totem pole and that's about all that's really native to the province. I just can't think of anything really suitable but I'm sure they will come up with something."

Mrs. Freda Palmer, 1122 Greenwood: "I think it would be very nice if we gave her some emblem denoting Victoria and not just any expensive present."

Philip Beattie, 2113 Foul Bay: "She's had so many things already it is hard to say what would be a welcome gift and still be different. Whatever it is it should be peculiar to Victoria, or at least to the province."

City Drops Out Of Running For 'Pan-Am'

Victoria has dropped out of the running for selection as a site for the Pan-American Games when they are held in Canada in 1963.

Mayor Percy Scourrah Friday said it had been decided that Victoria could not host the games without a tremendous construction program of athletic facilities.

The mayor obtained specifications for the 10-day sports affair attended by 2,000 athletes and coaches from North and South America.

The specifications were turned over to the Greater Victoria Sports Council for a thorough study to see if Victoria could meet the requirements.

"We decided it was well beyond our financial ability to provide what was needed," the mayor said.

Victoria would have had to duplicate Vancouver's construction of Empire Stadium and other sports facilities when it hosted the British Empire Games a few years ago.

City Realtor Dies at 56

A well-known real estate salesman and Victoria native son, Reginald V. Caselton, died here today in his 56th year.

Mr. Caselton had been associated with the real estate department of Pemberton Holmes Ltd. and was a member of Vancouver's Quadra Lodge No. 2, A.F. & A.M.

He is survived by the widow, Mrs. Ida Caselton, 3720 Blenkinsop Road; two daughters, Mrs. Mervyn Bingham, Seattle, and Mrs. Gloria Whitehead, Victoria, and three grandchildren.

Funeral will be held in Haywards Chapel at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

SEA DISASTERS

NEW YORK (AP) — The greatest ship-iceberg disaster in history was the sinking of the Titanic with a loss of 1,517 lives in the Atlantic on April 15, 1912.

The White Star liner, like the Danish vessel Hans Hedtoft that struck an iceberg Friday, was on her maiden voyage.

The Titanic then was the biggest, most luxurious and believed to be the safest ship afloat.

The 852-ton liner, of 46,328 gross tons, was en route from Southampton to New York. Most of the 2,224 passengers and crew aboard had retired for the night when shortly before midnight on April 14 she sideswiped a huge iceberg and ripped a long gash in her side.

At 2:20 a.m. the next day, the unbelievable happened. The great "unsinkable" four-stacked liner slid beneath the sea.

The Titanic played no favorites. Carried to their doom along with many steerage passengers were financiers such as John Jacob Astor, Benjamin Guggenheim and Isador Straus.

The Titanic sinking was one of the most dramatic sea stories in all time.

But it was not the greatest in loss of life.

6,000 DIE IN BALTIC

Six thousand Germans died in the Baltic in 1945 when Soviet torpedoes sent the German transport Wilhelm Gustloff to the bottom. She was carrying German refugees, including women and children, from Poland as the Russian forces advanced. Nazi wartime censorship concealed the disaster.

The next month 3,800 persons were lost when the refugee ship Kiangya exploded and sank off Shanghai.

More than 1,600 died in an explosion when the Belgian relief ship Imo and French munition ship Mont Blanc collided Dec. 6, 1917, in Halifax harbor.

Some other memorable ship disasters:

The Cunard liner Lusitania was sunk with a loss of 1,198 lives by a German submarine on May 7, 1915, off the south-east coast of Ireland.

A collision between the Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of Ireland and the Danish collier Storstad in the St. Lawrence River cost 1,024 lives on May 20, 1914.

A boiler explosion aboard the steamship Sultana, carrying exchanged northern civil war prisoners, took 1,450 lives on the Mississippi River near Memphis, Tenn., on April 27, 1865.

END TO EXCURSION

A fire aboard the excursion vessel Gen. Slocum was fatal to 1,021 persons June 15, 1904, in New York's East River.

The steamer Eastland overturned in Chicago River July 24, 1915, with a loss of 812 lives.

More recent disasters have included the sinking of the Italian liner Andrea Doria in a collision with the Swedish liner Stockholm July 25, 1956. Fifty lives were lost.

Father Seeks False Arrest Compensation

The father of a Victoria man acquitted on a charge of breaking and entering a Vancouver club, is considering asking Attorney-General Robert Bonner for advice on recovering the $500 it cost him to defend his son.

"I know Mr. Bonner is a busy man these days," said Joseph Baird, 518 Sumas, "but I feel I might as well start at the top of the heap."

The case concerned a breaking and entering at the Canadian Legion building, 836 Seymour Street, Vancouver, on or about Dec. 27, Edwin Ross Baird, 23, was charged, and acquitted last Thursday at a police court trial in Vancouver.

The senior Baird is angry, and considering a suit of false arrest, because of what he considers an extremely poor case against his son.

"For one thing," he said, "my son in no way answered the description of the man the building janitor reported seeing, and striking with an axe."

"For another, he was here in Victoria from the day before Christmas to the day after the offence occurred. He couldn't have been in both places. Yet I had the expense of boat fares for myself and others of the family, hotel bills in Vancouver, and lawyer's fees to prove something that simple investigation should have turned up."

He suggested that someone in the club that was entered believed the offence was an "inside job," and blamed his son because he was a member and often on the premises.

But the approach made by two Victoria detectives in arresting his son.

"They came to our home at night and demanded that my son go with them," he said. "They showed no credentials, and when I refused either to let them come in the house or take my son, they went away. The next day they came back with proper summons."

WEEKEND WRITER SAYS 'YES'

Local Educators Express Views

The statement, "English Schools Are Better Than Ours," is the title of an article in Weekend Magazine accompanying today's Times. The writer, a 21-year-old University of B.C. official, Arthur Sager, now studying at Oxford, bases his belief in the superiority of English schooling on the results received in England by his three children and a nephew. Following is what local school authorities thought of Sager's article and his blanket statement that "competition is sadly lacking in Canadian education and there are no challenging heights to scale in Canadian schools."

By DAVID COWLESHAW

In the main, Victoria's top educators agreed with Arthur Sager that English schooling is superior to Canadian.

But they hastened to qualify that judgment with a rash of arguments in defence of Canadian educational methods that Sager evidently did not consider before rushing into print.

School officials—both in the provincial Department of Education and at the local level—obviously did not like the article.

It was prostituted by bias, they said. It tended to over-generalize. Sager was unfair.

With but one exception, Victoria's school experts pointed indignantly at the number of years England had been perfecting her schooling system, then compared it to the relatively little time Canada had been at it.

But after all the harsh words and impetuous patriotic squeals had died away, they one and all admitted to envy of the English school curriculum, promising to follow in the old country's footsteps when time and money permitted.

There was not complete surrender, however. Several educators felt England had not all the answers and might well benefit from adapting some of Canada's school foibles—the more class-equal relationship between teacher and pupil, for instance, and the unrestricted academic atmosphere of some Canadian universities that points a child in the direction he wants to go, then lets him get there at his own speed.

City educators disagreed vehemently with Sager's statement that Canadian school-boys (girls, too, presumably) are "keen about sampling everything but hard work."

Nor did they take kindly to his knuckle-rapping of Canadian schoolchildren who don't wear the dull English uniforms. But what angered the most of all was Sager's peremptory and surprisingly unqualified statement that "competition is sadly lacking in Canadian education."

'Awfully Difficult to Compare'

They shook their heads, too, over his theory that "teaching must be less frustrating in England than in Canada." But the author won approval for his assertion that Canadian departments of education were "niggardly" by comparison with their English counterparts.

Kenneth Leeming, 51-year-old vice-chairman of Greater Victoria School Board, began his reply to Sager's article with the admonition, "It is awfully difficult to compare the two school systems."

He then went on to point out that a scheme providing for faster tuition of top-notch Canadian students—what we call an enriched program—was being tried out in the province and, if successful, would parallel a similar English system.

"But I agree with Sager that there is some lack of competition in our schools. This is due to our method of reporting on students to parents. When I was in school a child's rating, say from one to 35 if there were 35 children in the class, was based on examinations, not on classwork."

"In our day it was a challenge to get up the ladder."

Population More Mobile Here

Mr. Leeming agreed there was some "rigidity" in Canadian teaching methods but noted that experimentation was costly, "and the department (of education) has the cost factor in mind all the time."

Mr. Leeming dismissed Sager's praise of classes with only 15 students as "unrealistic in Canada with the present teacher shortage," but thought the provincial government should make more money available for schools.

The argument that England had been evolving and polishing its educational system for 500 or 600 years compared to 100 years in Canada, was most strongly brought out by Richard Reeve, 42, chairman of the school board's buildings and grounds committee and father of two school-age children.

"I am prepared to accept there are many good points in the English system, but Sager apparently is talking only about grammar schools serving the top 20 per cent."

"We have to have standardization. Our schools cannot be too flexible because ours is a mobile population. England's people never move. One teacher from England told me his class of pupils was the same today as it was three years ago."

Mr. Reeve would not accept that sport is over-emphasized in Canada, but conceded that "we make too much of the stars."

"We must educate people to the need for larger play areas—are you listening, city council?" so that everyone may participate in games to develop sportsmanship. It has been said that many of England's battles were won on the playing fields of Eton."

The inference from Sager's article that sex flourished in Canadian schools was roundly refuted by Mr. Reeve.

"I don't agree," he said. "There is less opportunity for sex in Canadian schools than in Canadian homes."

In summary, Mr. Reeve stressed the age of England again and said he "would be disgusted if their schools weren't better than ours."

He also mentioned that Britain could go 2½ times into B.C.—"education control is easy in a small country" and that in the 10 years he had been on the school board local student enrolment had climbed from 3,200 to 20,000.

"You could not find a similar situation anywhere in England."

TWO MEN KILLED

NEW YORK (AP)—Two patrolmen, attracted by bottles falling from a second-floor window of a tenement, walked into an armed holdup of a card game today. A gun battle broke out and one policeman and one of the three holdup men were killed.

The two other bandits escaped.

Patrolman Michael Talkowsky, 23, was mortally wounded. Before he collapsed, Talkowsky fired five bullets. His partner, patrolman Richard Melita, emptied his gun.

One of the gunmen tentatively identified as Francisco Cruz, 25, fell dead under the police counterforce.

The bottles were tossed by Sylvia Spero, 40, the wife of one of the card players. She had been ordered into another room during the holdup because she was pregnant and, while unobserved, she decided to signal for help.

B.C. Man Plants 'H-Bomb' In U.S. as Shock Message

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Russian-born Vancouver man said Friday night he travelled across the United States to deposit a "hydrogen bomb" between the White House and the Pentagon in Washington.

Nicholas Salvabiancos Schatroph, claiming to be a former Communist, told a press conference he would sell his story to the highest bidder. He said it "makes a farce of our defenses against atomic warfare."

Salvabiancos, as he calls himself, said the "bomb" in the form of a wooden box was made in Odessa, Russia, and brought here on a Russian ship. He said he carried the thing through 15 states, crossing the Canada-United States border six times.

The box, 18 inches square, is labelled with two large letters HB, top hydrogen bomb. A small sign on the side of the box said it was made in the Soviet Union.

Salvabiancos speaks with a heavy Russian accent and said he is a citizen neither of Canada nor the United States.

On several occasions during his trip to Washington, Salvabiancos said, he chatted and ate with U.S. service men with the box in plain view.

He has written a 20,000-word story of his journey to Washington and has 48 photographs of the trip, which he hopes to sell.

He said he conducted the experiment last autumn to point out the folly of defenses against atomic warfare, to bring the people of the free world a message of peace from a group of Russian people who look to the free world for leadership in peace, and to raise money to further his work for oppressed people behind the Iron Curtain.

"My bomb is a shock message to the free world to start working for peace," he said.

Salvabiancos would not disclose the location of the lettered box except to say it was hidden underwater between the White House and the Pentagon.

Vessel Vanishes After Hitting Berg

(Times News Services)

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld.—Arctic darkness and worsening weather conditions closed in off the Greenland coast today dimming hope of survival for 95 persons aboard a Danish ship that hit an iceberg and was feared to have sunk.

"As time goes on the chances diminish but we're still looking," a Coast Guard spokesman in New York said.

The cargo-passenger vessel Hans Hedtoft was last heard from about 24 hours ago when it reported that it was sinking slowly. Searchers have found no sign of the ship.

Danish Premier H. C. Hansen said in Copenhagen that "fear is gnawing on us."

(A radio message picked up Friday said 90 passengers and 40 crew were aboard, but the Greenland department in Copenhagen said she carried 55 passengers and 40 crew members. The department said all passengers were Danes or Greenlanders.)

The U.S. Coast Guard cutter Campbell, which reached the area in late morning, was expected to stand by during the long, cold night and resume its search in the morning.

The Coast Guard said weather in the disaster area tonight would be marked by 35 to 60 mile an hour winds, seas as high as 22 to 27 feet, visibility of less than one mile and snow changing to rain.

A spokesman said the winds were shifting from north to south, bringing in fog, mist and pushing the ice pack together.

The official pointed out the difficulties of finding anyone in the remote area—cold, ice, isolation and only eight hours of daylight each day.

The cutter Campbell reported, "ice conditions make navigation in the search area very hazardous."

Five Ships in General Area

The small German trawler Johannes Kruss, first to reach the general area where Hedtoft was last reported, called in earlier today that it could find no trace of the ship.

There are five ships in the general area of the missing Hedtoft now, including the German fishing vessel Poseidon and two U.S. weather ships, Alpha and Bravo.

without finding any trace of the ship or lifeboats.

The Johannes Kruss reported at 7:10 a.m. that it had been searching for the stricken ship for eight hours without finding a trace. The trawler was buffeted by 60-mile-an-hour winds and high waves.

Ice packs were closing in from the north, adding to the hazards for ships steaming up from North Atlantic shipping lanes to join the search.

In Copenhagen, King Frederik IX summoned Premier H. C. Hansen to report on the progress of the search. Then Hansen called his cabinet into extraordinary session.

'Plenty Ice . . . We Must Go'

The Kruss radioed the approaching Campbell:

"Have searched, nothing found or seen, no lights or lifeboats or ship."

"Plenty ice from northwest . . . we must go. We are becoming ice bound . . . it is dangerous for the ship and we can do no more."

The Hedtoft was in a danger zone that is not part of the North Atlantic steamship routes guarded by an international ice patrol, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said.

These areas have been patrolled by an international ice-berg warning service since 1913, a year after the Titanic disaster.

The reported position of the Hedtoft was 30 miles southeast of Cape Farewell at the southern tip of Greenland, the coast guard said. The closest point of land was 24 miles away.

Most prominent of passengers aboard was Augo Lynge, one of Greenland's representatives to the Danish parliament.

'Unsinkable' Design Used In Vessel

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (UPI)—The Hans Hedtoft, Danish cargo-passenger ship reported sinking off Greenland after hitting an iceberg, was built specially to withstand that type of collision.

And she was skippered by a veteran of Arctic navigation, Capt. P. L. Rasmussen.

The Hedtoft was painted a bright orange, so that it would be easier to spot in snowstorms or bad weather.

In fact, the Royal Greenland Trading Company which built the 2,857-ton vessel as its flagship and sent it out on its ill-fated maiden voyage, did its best to make the ship "unsinkable."

Architects designing the ship drew from the years of experience the company and its crews had in Arctic sailing.

SEVEN COMPARTMENTS

Its hull was divided into seven water-tight compartments. If one or two of them took in water, the ship was designed to stay afloat because the water would remain only in the flooded compartments and would not spread to the rest of the hull.

To resist the ice that all ships encounter in northern waters, it had a full-length double bottom and strengthened sides. Such strengthening, however, cannot be expected to withstand a full-force collision with an iceberg.

It has an auxiliary engine in addition to its regular power plants reported flooded in its distress calls.

It carried three lifeboats made of light metal alloy, a motor launch, and several rubber dinghies that inflate automatically and are equipped with radios.

TOW TRUCK CREW and police used cutting torch to extricate three men from wreck of car which went off Trans-Canada Highway at Goldstream at 4 a.m. today. Pulled out between windshield and roof were Laszlo

NORMAN CRIBBENS IN THE LEGISLATURE

British Columbia's 52 legislators from far and wide are resting this weekend after the first week of the Throne Speech debate, and a pregnant silence dwells over the stately chamber where so many battles have yet to be fought.

So far, 16 members have spoken in the debate and the rest will be heard before next Friday when Premier Bennett brings down his anxiously-awaited budget.

The session-up to now has been as quiet as the premier predicted, but there is little likelihood it will continue so. The CCP is in fighting mood over unemployment in B.C. and the two Liberals will have lots more to say about Wenner-Gren and the Peace River power project.

Most members think highly of the suggestion from Victoria MLA J. Donald Smith that tax relief should be given to owners of old homes in the city who wish to spend money improving them.

Mr. Smith said many such owners are afraid to improve their properties for fear of inviting higher taxes. He recommended tax exemptions to the extent of the improvements made.

"This is the most sensible proposition we have heard this session," commented a CCF member. "I hope the government will act upon it."

Wearing a bright red tie and matching carnation, Mr. Nimsick was in lively form as he twitted the government with being short of cabinet ministers.

He hinted that the many compliments showered on CCF member Randolph Harding by government members were intended to lure him over to the Social Credit ranks. "Are you so short of cabinet material?" asked Mr. Nimsick.

Mr. Harding supplied the answer. "We will have all the cabinet posts at the next election," he said.

My own impression is that government members are flattering Mr. Harding in a deliberate effort to discredit CCF leader Robert Strachan; and Mr. Harding is a much less formidable opponent. He is so quiet and reasonable that he might almost be called Liberal (with a small L).

When Education Minister Leslie Peterson stated that everyone who really wants university training should have the opportunity to get it, CCF member Tony Gargrave from Mackenzie remarked:

"I haven't had mine yet." Mr. Gargrave has taken two years of the arts course at the University of British Columbia and is now studying for law.

"We wish him good fortune in his university career," Mr. Peterson said, "and we hope he will graduate in due time."

agreed with Sager that English schools were better than Canadian schools, but she made little bones about her general approval of English schooling.

"We could learn much from England's educational system," she said. "I would like to have taken my post-graduate work in England. England is older, more cultured."

Mother of three children, one of them a teacher, Mrs. McGill felt many of the qualities of English schooling had still to be built into the Canadian system.

"But the pioneering days of Canada are past and already ours is a good—underlying good—educational set-up."

Mrs. McGill chuckled and said "That's nonsense" when taxed with Sager's opinion that Canadian schoolchildren do not like to work hard, but added:

"If England teaches boys and girls that hard work as well as intelligence is necessary to overcome obstacles and make the most of opportunities—then England has a superior educational system."

She added that the "idea that work is something to be avoided is caught from parents."

In capsule, Mrs. McGill admired England's schooling but was convinced Canada would at least equal it in time—a lot of time.

Municipal school inspector John Gough refused comment on the Sager article, except to say, "Mr. Sager has a right to his opinions. There is freedom of speech in this country, you know."

Provincial assistant director of curriculum John Meredith left discussion of the Sager piece to his superior, Dr. J. F. K. English, superintendent of education and deputy minister of education.

Dr. English labelled the article "silly" and replied, "I wouldn't know" when asked if, in his opinion, English schools were better than Canadian.

"That statement cannot be proved," he said. "Mr. Sager's experiences—and they are just one's man's—could be duplicated in thousands of cases across Canada."

You don't have to go abroad. We in B.C. have the type of school the people want. There are thousands of serious students in Canada who do their homework and take school seriously."

Type of School People Want

Final volleys in Sager's direction were aimed by Mrs. Elizabeth Maunsell, chairman of the school board public relations committee. But they did not always hit the target because Mrs. Maunsell, too, admitted to admiration of the English system of education.

"In England they don't try to cram in so much. They stick to the basic things. When Canadian boys and girls get to junior high school they have the idea they are grown up, but they are not. This doesn't happen in England."

Mrs. Maunsell also aligned herself with Sager in his denunciation of a Canadian system that made it "too easy" to get into universities.

"Many Canadians go to university just for the sake of being able to say they've been to one," she said.

But Mrs. Maunsell reserved final judgment on Sager's pro-English arguments on the premise that surely represents the ultimate purpose of schooling in any country.

"What counts really, after all, is what type of citizens English schools turn out. That is the supreme test. When you know that, then you can decide whether her educational system is better than ours."

In short, local educators picked up a piece of chalk and scratched "We agree" on the blackboard in answer to Sager's opinion.

But they added the note that it would not always be that way and that one day when Canada was as old as England is now and was not hamstrung by such things as space, money and that abstract quality, lack of culture, Canada's schools would equal those of the older country.

Meanwhile they were doing the best they could with the material at hand.

Inco Metals at work in Canada

Inco Copper helps you enjoy modern electrical living

...but three Canadian homes out of five need up-to-date wiring

SUPPOSE the house you're living in is ten years old or more. The original wiring system did its job well in those days. But can this same wiring system handle the many new appliances you have in 1958? Or in five or ten years from now?

Probably not. Even some new houses are not properly wired to carry the electrical load you need in your home. In fact, more than 3 out of every 5 Canadian homes have inadequate or out-of-date wiring.

If your home is one of these, it means that you're not getting good service from your appliances. They're operating too slowly... using more electricity than they should... and costing you more money. Lights are not as bright as they ought to be. Electric motors operate slowly. Fuses may be blowing. These are sure signs of inadequate wiring. And it could mean that you're playing with fire... because overloaded wiring can help create a fire hazard.

Make sure your home has a safe and up-to-date wiring system. If you spot any of the tell-tale signs, call in an electrical contractor and have him inspect the wiring. He can show you how to enjoy the safety and convenience of modern electrical living.

Inco supplies copper to Canadian companies for the manufacture of heavy duty power cable and the wiring that goes into your home. And you use many other products made from Inco ORC® Brand Copper every day. For more than half of all the copper produced by Inco is used right here in Canada. Another example of the way Inco metals serve the Canadian industries that serve you.

New Prices For Wheat Announced

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Wheat Board Friday announced a new schedule of wheat prices aimed at giving western farmers the benefit of freight savings to come from the operation of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Included in the move was an increase of 5½ cents in the basic price of wheat stored at the Lakehead. This raised Friday's price for No. 1 northern to $1.69½ a bushel.

The wheat board said the increase will be offset by reduced shipping costs when deep sea freighters will be able to sail right to the Lakehead for grain cargoes. The seaway is scheduled to open in June.

An official said the saving thus will be passed on to the wheat producer.

ATLANTIC PRICES

The board for the first time quoted prices for St. Lawrence River and Atlantic ports. No change was made in prices of wheat for shipment from Vancouver or the Hudson Bay port of Churchill, Man.

Pacific coast prices Friday were 6½ cents higher than Lakehead quotations and Churchill prices were 7½ cents higher. Initial quotations for St. Lawrence ports were 16½ cents higher than the Lakehead and Atlantic ports 18½ cents higher.

The wheat board said the new schedule extends the policy of quoting separate selling prices for wheat stored at the Lakehead, Churchill, and the Pacific coast, designed to give flexibility in pricing and to make Canadian wheat competitive on overseas markets no matter which port it is shipped from.

Total Sales: 5,988,000.

Victoria, Across the Bay From Vancouver—It Says

By HAL MALONE

Times Business Editor

Good afternoon, class. All ready for your lesson in geography? Today we're going to tell you about Vancouver and Victoria. Here's a panoramic picture. Read the text carefully:

"Vancouver: One of the world's most modern and beautiful cities. On the western shore of vast and varied Canada; across the bay is picturesque, historic Victoria."

The foregoing is not a product of this column's imagination. It is contained in a full-page page ad in the current issue of Holiday magazine.

The ad was inserted by the Canadian Government Travel Bureau. As an ex-Vancouverite, we took a long look at the picture and wondered what the people in the Canadian Government Travel Bureau have been smoking lately.

Across the bay from Vancouver lies not historic, picturesque Victoria but little old West Vancouver. Time changes many things but not the Canadian Government's Travel Bureau's conception of how the west coast should look. Recently the bureau depicted Vancouver as nestled "in the shadow of the snow-capped Rockies."

Apart from maintaining the bureau's record for barking up the wrong tree, the Holiday ad, 1. Caused George Warren, Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau commissioner to insert the warm end of a cigar into his mouthpiece, resulting in some pretty hot language; and,

2. Resulted in Vancouver-based seagulls (which traditionally follow the boats to Victoria) demanding that the CPR stop sending its ships to the wrong port.

The CPR is investigating.

Progress has been made in another direction in Victoria. The latest issue of Tie-In, the B.C. Electric statistical bible, shows electric appliance sales were up $318,133 or 9.1 per cent in Greater Victoria last year.

Electric clothes dryers led the parade with sales exceeding 30 per cent. Automatic washer sales were up 11 per cent and were second by only 28 units to the 1,421 conventional washers sold. Electric range sales totalled $380,228, the highest ever reported in a 12-month period. Refrigerator sales were up about 3.5 per cent; freezer sales rose by 1.5 per cent.

Total sales of gas and electrical appliances were $5,194,187 compared with $5,079,848. As Premier Bennett might say, Victorians aren't conservative about their desire for power. They intend to use more of it, even if it means extending their (Social) Credit.

For the fourth successive year, bank clearings rose in Victoria over the same period last year. They amounted to $8,981,054 compared with $8,019,975. The clearings reflect business prosperity to the extent that they represent the value of cheques written through local banks.

Annual report of Massey-Ferguson Ltd. shows 1958 was a fertile year for the farm equipment business. MF Consolidated net profits rose from $4,737,341 to an astronomical $13,025,282. World-wide sales increased 7 per cent to a new high of $440,109,000.

In what must rank high as the understatement of the year, MF chairman W. Eric Phillips says results for 1958 "are encouraging." He says sales and earnings for 1959 are expected to be higher.

If they go much higher, Mr. Phillips may well be called the man who designed the "up look." He'll be in great demand not only by Massey-Ferguson but also by U.S. rocket specialists who aren't having nearly as much success in keeping their product up.

STREET BLASTERS PLAY TRICKY TRIGGER GAME WITH PEDESTRIANS

A Dynamiter's Got To Be Delicate—Or Up We All Go

By JOHN MIKA
Blowing up city streets is a fine art.
Without skill and caution, there would be a daily casualty list of sidewalk superintendents who watch the rapid excavation program on downtown streets in this year's phase of the B.C. Electric underground wiring project.
Before the wires come down off the poles in 1961, a good part of the rock under the roads has to come up—with a bang.
"The public is our main worry," said 31-year-old Emile Kalyan in an interview.
A foreman and dynamiter with A. J. Barr Ltd., he's seen a lot of rock smashed in two previous years on the underground wiring job.
This year's "powder man" is Harry Hill, 2642 Shelbourne, on loan from another contractor.
Recalling some anxious moments at the plunger which triggers a detonation, Mr. Kalyan said:
"Some of the pedestrians just give you a dirty look when they are warned that a charge is about to be set off. Some of them will even walk right through the danger zone."
"You have to be ready to stop in a split-second. It slows cause you have water lines, sewer lines and gas lines often running close to your charge.

"To much powder or the wrong angle in drilling holes for the dynamite, and you can cause a lot of damage. It takes a long time to learn where and how you should place your charge."
"In fact, it is an art. You never know too much about it and no matter how long you're at it, you can still learn," Mr. Kalyan said.
Depending on how the holes are drilled, spaced, in a rock determines whether a three-foot blast of rock will break up in such a way that its surface is undisturbed or whether it—and an adjacent sewer pipe—are blasted sky high.

"You also have to gauge just how much powder you will use. Too little won't do the job and too much can cause a lot of damage—especially to the plate-glass windows all around you."
"If it's not done just right, most of the blast will be straight up and out—throwing a lot of rock around."
For difficult shots, a mat of woven truck tires can be used to smother a charge in a deep cut, preventing the ejection of rocks. For shallow cuts, a mat of chained logs is used.

The type of charge is important, too.
"I prefer to work with 40 per cent. Forcite, for a job like this although there are men who prefer 60 per cent. The lower charge gives you more heaving power to break up rock from underneath because its action is slower," Mr. Kalyan said.
Biggest explosion he has triggered while working on the BCE project occurred last year when he set off 260 sticks of dynamite in one shot.
"That's a fairly powerful charge to let go on a street job but it went off all right," Mr. Kalyan, who has worked with Barr Construction for eight years and obtained his dynamiter's certificate six years ago, mentioned another aspect of a powder man's life.

"I still get nervous once in a while. You just can't help it because there are so many things that could happen."
"I've had some scares but I've only been hurt once and it wasn't from dynamite. A big stone rolled down on a construction job and cracked the bone in my leg."
"I suppose you've got to have some luck when you're handling dynamite but you have to do your work as though there wasn't any luck to help you."

EMILE KALYN... it's a great art.

Civic Staff Wage Rebuff 'Ridiculous'

City council's decision Friday not to offer pay increases to employees was termed "ridiculous," "amazing" and "disappointing" by City Hall union spokesmen today.
At least one union will seek "immediate" appointment of a conciliation officer.
The unions asked for boosts averaging between 15 and 16 per cent, but Mayor Scurrah said council felt any increases were unjustified.
"I am amazed by this decision," Tom Smith, spokesman for inside staff, said today.
"A recent management employee survey showed City Hall staffs earned 15.78 per cent less than private workers in comparable jobs. If the city expects us to continue working at a loss, they are mistaken."

First Dip Here In Unemployed

'HEAR MY ANSWER'

MLA Invites Scurrah To Meeting

Former alderman Donald A. Smith, M.L.A., said today he would be "happy" to answer Mayor Percy Scurrah's charge of "impertinence" Monday at the 8 p.m. ratepayers meeting in the lower Crystal Garden.
The mayor made the statement about Mr. Smith's stand that ratepayers had made a wrong decision on the downtown improvement and parking plan.
"I hope the mayor will be there," said Mr. Smith, "as there will be some interesting answers for the public."

MONTY'S DOUBLE — M.E. Clifton James, who was Field Marshal Montgomery's real-life double during the Second World War, is due to arrive in Victoria Tuesday for a six-hour stopover. Mr. James will tour Canada, making speeches in several major centres. He will address the British Overseas League in Vancouver Tuesday night. While here he will be a guest at the Employees Hotel.

The first reduction since October in the number of registered unemployed was recorded this week in Victoria, the local National Employment Service announced today.
There are now 5,812 unemployed applicants on file compared to 5,846 a week ago. Current total is composed of 3,984 men and 1,828 women.

The job improvement is laid to the end of seasonal layoffs in the retail trade and re-hirings for January sales, together with resumption of activity in the construction, lumbering and logging industries.

WINTER WORK PERKS

Meanwhile, the NES winter work campaign is reported doing well, evidenced by considerable renovation, remodeling and redecorating work being carried out in the city.

One city contractor reports his jobbing work has increased by 48 per cent over last winter.

Also, the municipal winter work plan on a labor cost-sharing basis with the federal government is now under way in Victoria, with some 75 men already put to work on eight projects started out of 29 approved so far.

TCA Definitely Quitting Says MP

Civic and business groups opposing Pacific Western Airlines' application to take over Vancouver-Victoria-Seattle service don't seem to realize that the present carrier, Trans-Canada Air Lines "will not continue the run," Victoria M.P. A. deB. McPhillips said today.

His statement was made in a letter to Mayor Percy Scurrah. Together with the Chamber of Commerce, Junior Chamber and Island bulb growers, the mayor wired Mr. McPhillips, Transport Minister re: Pacific Western Airlines and TCA president Gordon McGregor when PWA announced it had applied to the Air Transport Board for a licence to operate the triangle service.

Mayor Scurrah questioned PWA's ability to maintain the same service as TCA, particularly in emergency periods such as the prolonged ferry strike last summer.

TCA carried 344,898 passengers last year, 300,178 in 1957. The company claimed it lost $1,300,000 on the run in 1957.

'OFF THE MAPS'

Mr. McPhillips' letter was interpreted by at least one opponent to the carrier change to mean that he supported PWA's application.

George Warren, commissioner of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau, said, "I can't understand his attitude."

Mr. Warren made the first TGA transcontinental flight into Victoria.

He denied Mr. McPhillips' claim that TCA will not continue its three-point service.

Mr. Warren produced a letter written by TCA president McGregor to Ray Ramsay, president Victoria Jaycees.

"There's nothing in it, it even suggests that TCA plans to abandon the service," said Mr. Warren.

Mr. McGregor, in his letter, clarified the company's position in regard to reconsidering its decision.

TCA, in response to PWA's publicly expressed desire to operate the routes, has offered to discontinue its service, subject to PWA receiving a licence. Mr. McGregor said, "I think you will see... why at no time since the (PWA) offer and (TCA) acceptance... could there be any question of TCA reconsidering a stand which, in my opinion, it had no alternative but to take in the face of its alleged economic inefficiency."

On TCA's alleged losses, Mr. McGregor said that on the basis of "fully allocated costs" every route bore its proper proportion of the company's general expense. West Coast services showed, in 1957, losses in excess of $1,000,000.

"This does not mean that had the company not been operating those routes in 1957 it would have been financially better off to the same extent. The discontinuance of West Coast services would relieve it of its direct operating costs on those routes but the indirect costs would be little affected by such a move."

In 1957 TCA's revenues did not meet the direct operating costs on the West Coast services but on the basis of accounting, the deficit was a minor fraction of that indicated on the fully allocated cost basis.

MONTE ROBERTS

Smarter forces are being brought to bear against the fairest city of them all.

And it is time for all indignant citizens to take pen in hand and start writing letters to the editor.

First the provincial cabinet starts talking about moving the seat of government away from Victoria.

The flimsy excuse used by the provincial cabinet is that, in event of all-out war, the seat of government would not be safe here on Vancouver Island.

The provincial cabinet apparently feels the seat of government would be safer in Kelowna, behind the hardware store—a fallacy if I ever heard one.

It is obvious the whole question of nuclear fusion, atomic explosions, and all-out warfare has been trumped up merely to deprive this city of the seat of government.

Is there no limit to the lengths to which these sinister forces will go to dim the luster of this, the fairest city of them all?

H-BOMB ON VICTORIA 'NOT WORTH WASTE' SAYS CIVIL DEFENCE

First they threaten us with taking away the seat of government.

Then they insult us by saying we're not worth wasting a bomb on.

Why, the local crumpet alone—to name but one essential industry—is worthy of a dozen H-bombs.

Civil defence should keep a civil tongue in its head. And as if this insult were not enough, the federal government has to get into the act.

The federal government, through its wholly-owned subsidiary, the Canadian Travel Bureau, has expended vast sums of money to purchase a full page ad in HOLIDAY Magazine.

The advertisement says Victoria is "across the bay" from (you should excuse the expression) Vancouver.

Words fail me, Vancouver (you should excuse the expression) is close enough as it is, without having the federal government move it "across the bay."

There you have it. The provincial cabinet, the civil defence organization, the whole blame federal government, moving in their sinister ways against the interests of this, the fairest city of them all.

Rally round, indignant citizens. Write is better than might.

A 19-year-old Nanaimo youth who drove through four red traffic signals and was chased through the business section at 40 miles an hour early today was fined $40 in city police court for careless driving.

William B. Russell told the court he drove past one flashing red light on entering the city and thought the other lights at Yates and Quadra, Pandora and Quadra, Blanshard and Pandora and Douglas and Pandora were the same.

Alexander Blair Paterson, 65, lawyer and resident here for the past 13 years, died in hospital Friday after a long illness.

Formerly of Edmonton, he set up a practice here, but was forced to retire a few years ago because of ill health. His wife, Ellen Jean, died a year ago.

He was a past master of St. Andrew's Lodge No. 49, AF & AM, and of the Saltier's Society of Victoria. Until recently he lived at 2799 Sea View Drive, and at the time of his death lived at 4000 Lockhaven Road.

Funeral services will be announced later by McCall Bros.

Complaints of this nature are handled here through the Chamber of Commerce, which operates a service much along the same lines as the BBB, but in a more limited manner. Actually, there is no reason why you couldn't write the BBB in Vancouver telling them your complaint.

AIR-SEA TEAMS TALLY FINE SCORE

Department of Fisheries vessel Howay declared during a routine report that it was engaged in a search for a fisheries man missing on a hunting trip to Porcher Island, in the Prince Rupert area.

Four vessels, 22 men, one helicopter and a light plane took part in the search. The man was found later the same day in good condition.

The second occurred a few days later when the rescue sub-coordinator at Kitimat reported a search was being carried out for the cabin cruiser Cougar, missing with four men aboard.

After searching for two days the men were found near Gertrude Point in Douglas Channel. All were in good condition and reported their anchor cable had fallen overboard and fouled the propeller.

The three mercy flights included the air evacuation of an Indian from Bella Coola suffering from gunshot wounds, and two airmen from RCAF Station Comox on Vancouver Island who were seriously ill. All were taken to hospital in Vancouver.

Of the five small craft and two barges salvaged through the efforts of the search and rescue agencies, the most valuable was a barge and its load of newsprint valued at about $600,000.

The tug LaVerne reported losing the barge near Pine Island in Queen Charlotte Straits during a gale.

The Rescue Centre radioed the tug Island Commander to assist in salvage operations. A line was attached to the drifting barge nearly two days later. By this time it had been blown nearly 100 miles north. It was then towed to Finlay Channel to wait until weather improved, before continuing its journey.

George Snags a Sponsor For Free Garden Club

Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau said George Warren has apparently won a 23-year fight to have Vancouver Island tourist literature enter the United States duty free.

Mr. Warren disclosed today a letter from Senator Don C. Magnuson of Washington State indicating that he has re-introduced a bill to the U.S. Congress calling for the lifting of duty on Island tourist literature into the U.S.

If it is approved by the Congress and finally by the Senate it will mark the end of Mr. Warren's fight for a reciprocal agreement.

Flowers Fill Church For Afternoon Vows

Baskets of iris and pink and white carnations, daffodils and pew markers of garlands of heather made a lovely setting for the wedding this afternoon of Miss Leslie Kathleen Field and Harry McGregor Sjöberg.

Bride is the daughter of Mrs. Madeline Field, St. Charles Street, and the late F. J. Field.

Groom is the son of Mrs. R. Campbell, Victoria, and J. A. Sjöberg, Metochin.

Vows were heard in St. Luke's Anglican Church, by Rev. T. D. B. Rager.

Eric Edwards played the organ and Mrs. J. Griffiths sang "O Perfect Love."

Stanley S. Wadge gave his niece in marriage.

Lace over taffeta formed the bouffant ballerina length bridal gown. The bodice with filly point sleeves and a scalloped oval neckline was sashed with a pleated taffeta cummerbund, floating into panels at the back. A coronet held her chapel length veil. The bride's 21st birthday present from her parents, a rhinestone necklace, was worn as jewellery. Five gardenias encircled with soft pink carnations and freesia formed the bridal bouquet.

Talisman rose nylon chiffon with deep velvet cummerbund in tone, fashioned the ballerina length gown worn by Miss Lois Field, maid of honor. Her bouquet was roses and carnations. Mrs. S. Stout, sister of the groom, was bridesmatron in yellow-chiffon. She carried a bouquet of yellow carnations and iris.

Mrs. Field, bride's mother, chose a model suit in navy with a soft green hat and a green orchid corsage. The groom's mother wore a teal blue two-piece dress with a white carnation corsage.

Stewart Stout was best man and Ken Gunter and Beach Richards were ushers.

At a reception at Holyrood House, Sidney Chiverval proposed the toast to the bride.

A turquoise cashmere suit with grey Persian lamb collar, a cloche velour hat in tone and a corsage of white carnations formed the bride's traveling ensemble.

Newlyweds will make their home at 1618 Hawthorne Street, Gordon Head on their return.

WEEKEND WRITER SAYS 'YES'

Do English Schools Top Ours?

Local Educators Express Views

The statement "English Schools Are Better Than Ours" is the title of an article in Weekend Magazine accompanying today's Times. The writer—41-year-old University of B.C. official Arthur Sager, now studying at Oxford—expresses his belief in the superiority of English schooling on the tuition received in England by his three children and a nephew. Following is what local school authorities thought of Sager's article and his blanket statement that "competition is sadly lacking in Canadian education and there are no challenging heights to scale in Canadian schools."

By DAVID COWLISHAW

In the main, Victoria's top educators agreed with Arthur Sager that English schooling is superior to Canadian.

But they hastened to qualify that judgment with a rash of arguments in defence of Canadian educational methods that Sager evidently did not consider before rushing into print.

School officials—both in the provincial Department of Education and at the local level—obviously did not like the article.

It was protested by bias, of Canada's school failures—the more class-equal relationship between teacher and pupil, for instance, and the unrestricted academic atmosphere of some Canadian universities that points a child in the direction he wants to go, then lets him get there at his own speed.

City educators disagreed vehemently with Sager's statement that Canadian school boys (girls, too, presumably) are "keen about sampling everything but hard work."

Nor did they take kindly to his knuckle-rapping of Canadian schoolchildren who don't wear the dull English uniforms. But what angered them most of all was Sager's peremptory and surprisingly unqualified statement that "competition is sadly lacking in Canadian education."

There was not complete surrender, however. Several educators felt England had not all the answers and might well benefit from adapting some

'Awfully Difficult to Compare'

They shook their heads, too, over his theory that "teaching must be less frustrating in England than in Canada." But the author won approval for his assertion that Canadian departments of education were "niggardly" by comparison with their English counterparts.

Kenneth Leeming, 54-year-old vice-chairman of Greater Victoria School Board, began his reply to Sager's article with the admonition, "It is awfully difficult to compare the two school systems."

He then went on to point out that a scheme providing for faster tuition of top-notch Canadian students—"what we call an enriched program"—was being tried out in the province and, if successful, would parallel a similar English system.

"But I agree with Sager that there is some lack of competition in our schools. This is due to our method of reporting on students to parents. When I was in school a child rating, say from one to 35 if there were 35 children in the class, was based on examinations, not on classwork."

"In our day it was a challenge to get up the ladder."

Population More Mobile Here

Mr. Leeming agreed there was some "rigidity" in Canadian teaching methods but noted that experimentation was costly, "and the department (of education) has the cost factor in mind all the time."

Mr. Leeming dismissed Sager's praise of classes with only 15 students as "unrealistic in Canada with the present teacher shortage," but thought the provincial government should make more money available for schools.

The argument that England had been evolving and polishing its educational system for 500 or 600 years compared to 100 years in Canada, was most strongly brought out by Richard Reeve, 42, chairman of the school board's buildings and grounds committee and father of two school-age children.

"I am prepared to accept there are many good points in the English system," but Sager apparently is talking only about grammar schools serving the top 20 per cent.

"We have to have standardization. Our schools cannot be too flexible because ours is a mobile population. England's people never move. One teacher from England told me his class of pupils was the same today as it was three years ago."

BOSTON (CP)—Boston Bruins regained fourth place from Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League today, winning a see-saw game 5-4.

The Bruins rallied from a two-goal deficit earlier in the game to count four times in the last period to Detroit's two goals.

Don McKenney fired what proved to be the winning goal at 13:37. Nick Mikoski's goal at 16:41 still left the Red Wings short.

The game was the 496th consecutive appearance for Detroit's Johnny Wilson, who hasn't missed an NHL game since January, 1952. He is aiming at the record of 500 consecutive games set more than 20 years ago by Murray Murdoch of the New York Rangers.

The Red Wings had a 2-0 lead early in the second period and it was halved before the period ended.

In the free-scoring third period Boston took a 3-2 lead and the Wings tied the game before the Bruins jumped in front 5-3 and then gave up one more goal.

Rookie Claude La Forge of Detroit and Boston's Johnny Bucyk squared off beside the Boston net late in the game. La Forge, suffering a bloody nose and a black eye as tempers ran hot. Both drew only roughing penalties.

Vessel Vanishes After Hitting Berg

(Times News Services)

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld.—Arctic darkness and worsening weather conditions closed in off the Greenland coast today dimming hope of survival for 95 persons aboard a Danish ship that hit an iceberg and was feared to have sunk.

"As time goes on the chances diminish but we're still looking," a Coast Guard spokesman in New York said.

The cargo-passenger vessel Hans Hedtoft was last heard from about 24 hours ago when it reported that it was sinking.

Searchers have found no sign of the ship.

Danish Premier H. C. Hansen said in Copenhagen that "fear is gnawing on us."

A radio message picked up Friday said 90 passengers and 40 crew were aboard, but the Greenland department in Copenhagen said she carried 55 passengers and 40 crew members.

(Among the passengers are known to be one doctor, 19 women and six or seven children. All are Danes or Greenlanders.)

The U.S. Coast Guard cutter Campbell, which reached the area in late morning, was expected to stand by during the long, cold night and resume its search in the morning.

The Coast Guard said weather in the disaster area tonight would be marked by 35 to 60 mile an hour winds, seas as high as 22 to 27 feet, visibility of less than one mile and snow changing to rain.

A spokesman said the winds were shifting from north to south, bringing in fog, mist and pushing the ice pack together.

The official pointed out the difficulties of finding anyone in the remote area—cold, ice, isolation and only eight hours of daylight each day.

The cutter Campbell reported, "ice conditions make navigation in the search area very hazardous."

Five Ships in General Area

The small German trawler Johannes Kruss, first to reach the general area where Hedtoft was last reported, called in earlier today that it could find no trace of the ship.

There are five ships in the general area of the missing Hedtoft now, including the German fishing vessel Poldon.

A U.S. Navy Super Constellation, a radar picket patrol plane, left Argentina, Nfld., 1,020 miles from the search area, to relieve a sister aircraft circling above the 20-foot North Atlantic waves without finding any trace of the ship or lifeboats.

The Johannes Kruss reported at 7:10 a.m. that it had been searching for the stricken ship for eight hours without finding a trace. The trawler was buffeted by 60-mile-an-hour winds and high waves.

Ice packs were closing in from the north, adding to the hazards for ships steaming up from North Atlantic shipping lanes to join the search.

In Copenhagen, King Frederik IX summoned Premier H. C. Hansen to report on the progress of the search. Then Hansen called his cabinet into extraordinary session.

'Plenty Ice'... We Must Go'

The Kruss radioed the approaching Campbell: "Have searched, nothing found or seen, no lights or lifeboats or ship."

"Plenty ice from northwest we must go. We are becoming ice bound... It is dangerous for the ship and we can do no more."

The Hedtoft was in a danger zone that is not part of the North Atlantic steamship routes guarded by an international ice patrol, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said.

These areas have been patrolled by an international ice-berg warning service since 1913, a year after the Titanic disaster.

The reported position of the Hedtoft was 30 miles southeast of Cape Farewell, at the southern tip of Greenland, the coast guard said. The closest point of land was 24 miles away.

Most prominent of passengers aboard was Augo Lynge, one of Greenland's representatives to the Danish parliament.

TWO MEN KILLED

NEW YORK (AP)—Two patrolmen, attracted by bottles falling from a second-floor window of a tenement, walked into an armed holdup of a card game today. A gun battle broke out and one policeman and one of the three holdup men were killed.

The two other bandits escaped.

Patrolman Michael Talkowsky, 23, was mortally wounded. Before he collapsed, Talkowsky fired five bullets. His partner, patrolman Richard Melita, emptied his gun.

One of the gunmen tentatively identified as Francis Cruz, 25, fell dead under the police counterfire.

The bottles were tossed by Sylvia Sepero, 40, the wife of one of the card players. She had been ordered into another room during the holdup because she was pregnant and, while unobserved, she decided to signal for help.

TOW TRUCK CREW and police used cutting torch to extricate three men from wreck of car which went off Trans-Canada Highway at Goldstream at 4 a.m. today. Pulled out between windshield and roof were Laszlo

Keckemiti, 556 Toronto, and Joseph Toth, 1559 Oak Bay Avenue, in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital, and Laszlo Kiraly, 910 Cook, discharged after emergency treatment of minor injuries. Car is total wreck.

B.C. Man Plants 'H-Bomb' In U.S. as Shock Message

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Russian-born Vancouver man said Friday night he travelled across the United States to deposit a Russian-made replica of a "hydrogen bomb" between the White House and the Pentagon in Washington. Nicholas Salvablanco Schatroph, claiming to be a former Communist, told a press conference he would sell his story to the highest bidder. He said it "makes a farce of our defenses against atomic warfare."

Salvablanco, as he calls himself, said the "bomb" in the form of a wooden box was made in Odessa, Russia, and brought here on a Russian ship. He said he carried the thing through 15 states, crossing the Canada-United States border six times.

The box, 18 inches square, is labelled with two large letters HB, for hydrogen bomb. A small sign on the side of the box said it was made in the Soviet Union.

Salvablanco speaks with a heavy Russian accent and said he is a citizen neither of Canada nor the United States. On several occasions during his trip to Washington, Salvablanco said, he chatted and ate with U.S. service men with the box in plan view.

He has written a 20,000 word story of his journey to Washington and has 48 photographs of the trip, which he hopes to sell.

He said he conducted the experiment last autumn to point out the folly of defenses against atomic warfare, to bring the people of the free world a message of peace from a group of Russian people who look to the free world for leadership in peace, and to raise money to further his work for oppressed people behind the Iron Curtain.

SALT SPRING UNGUARDED

Fire Brigade Petition Made

GANGES—A petition is being circulated on Salt Spring Island asking for formation of a fire protection district, members of Salt Spring Island Chamber of Commerce were told at their annual meeting here this week.

There are 850 resident property owners and 340 owners who live off the island. The petition must have 70 per cent support to be adopted.

When the survey is completed, results will go to the water controller in Victoria, who will assess the vote of the various areas, then call a public meeting for election of a board of trustees.

The petition and drive for establishment of a fire protection district has been carried on by a joint committee representing the chamber and the volunteer fire brigade here.

The plan already has been given enthusiastic support at public meetings held on the island to explain the program.

Aim of the group is to have a fire truck carrying a 500-gallon tank, and a fire hall adequate for housing the truck and equipment, and training firemen.

Cost would be up to $24,000, which would be borrowed from the government and repaid over a 10-year period, and charge to the ratepayer would be about two mills.

Since insurance rates were due to rise this month in unprotected areas of B.C., it was estimated that the increase would be cut in half by formation of the district, thus offsetting to a great extent the tax increase.

Dulles To Europe For Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will leave Tuesday for London, Paris and Bonn for talks on Berlin and the problem of Germany.

The state department said Dulles "has concluded that it would be useful that at the present stage of developments in Europe for him to exchange views personally with the governments of the United Kingdom, France and Germany."

Officials said Dulles' trip was designed to work out strategy on meeting the Russian threat against Berlin and also to consider the tactics in dealing with the problem of a German peace treaty.
